Union Bituminous Coal Belt Gripped By Dispute In Wage

From Illinois East to West Virginia Unionized Coal Fields are in Idleness—About 75,000 Miners are Out of Work—End of Strike Unknown.

Chicago, April 1 (AP).—America's unionized bituminous coal belt was idle today.

From Illinois east to West Virginia Panhandle, hundreds of mine shipples were closed; approximately 75,000 members of the United Mine Workers were without work. And there was no indication of when operations would resume.

Last midnight was the closing hour.

In Illinois, failure of miners and operators to agree on a new wage contract, after four weeks of conferences, added between 43,000 and 45,000 diggers to the jobless lists.

Four thousand more men were thrown out of work in a similar situation in Indiana's deep shaft mines. The Indiana mine owners and laborers had adjourned their conference pending outcome of the Illinois meeting and neither group made any last-minute attempts to call off the suspension.

No Agreement.

In Illinois and Indiana, the shutdown was neither a strike nor shutout. There was no agreement to continue operations.

In both states, efforts were expected to be continued to effect compromises on contracts.

In Ohio and the West Virginia panhandle, a strike called by District 6 officials of the United Mine Workers went into effect at midnight—following the failure of operators and miners to settle wage differences.

Twenty-five thousand men joined the idle ranks in Ohio fields and several thousand were expected by union officials to answer the strike call in the West Virginia panhandle.

Today was also a miners' holiday; commemorating the signing 34 years ago of the first agreement with operators. This agreement included the eight-hour day and followed the first general strike of the union.

In Illinois, some 25,000 more members of the union have been jobless for many months. Those thrown out of work today in all of the fields have been at work only part time.

No Trouble Expected.

No trouble was expected in any of the fields. The only demonstration planned was in Bellaire, Ohio.

In Ohio, picketing of mines was planned by union leaders. No word of such picketing was forthcoming from mine union leaders in Indiana or Illinois. In Illinois, the miners policy group notified operators that any mine could remain open and work under the old scale of from $5.95 to $10.07.

The Illinois-Indiana scales have been at the top of all fields. The Illinois miners sought an increase of the minimum daily wage to $7 and a six-hour day, five day week. The shorter week was necessary, the miners contended, to provide employment to all members of the union.

The operators maintained a scale to allow competition with the eastern fields was necessary to save the state's coal industry.

Coal Prices Now At Lowest Level In Thirteen Years

Local Retail Dealers Announce a Drop in Coal Prices in Kingston—Prices Quoted Lowest they Have Been Since 1919.

Local retail coal dealers have announced a drop in coal prices as is customary at this season of the year. The new price scale went into effect today. The new price represents a reduction ranging from $1 to $1.75 a ton from the winter price. Stove size, $12.25 delivered into bin.

Chestnut size, $12 delivered into bin.

Pea size, $10.25 delivered into bin.

From these prices a discount of 40 cents a ton will be allowed for cash.

Baby Saved After Falling Into Mine

Miami, Okla., April 1 (AP)—Brave baby Gerald Collins lived today, saved from a terrifying prison deep in a mine drill hole by strong arms and brave hearts.

Wan and bruised, but with a courageous "I'm all right," the three-year-old, doubled up for eleven hours twenty feet below the surface of the earth at the Mary Ann Lead and Zinc Mine near Picher, was rescued through a parallel shaft last night.

"He's alive," cried a husky miner. Out from beyond the lights of the little rescue area a roar of thanks echoed through the hills from the throats of thousands of watchers.

Whirled in an ambulance eleven miles to the Baptist Hospital here cuddling in the mother's embrace of Mrs. Paul Collins, little Gerald "talked a blue streak" and didn't appear badly hurt.

But X-ray pictures were scanned today for possible fractures by three physicians who waited at the rescue party shaft until the boy was taken carefully from the drill-hole.

There was danger, too, said Dr. General Pinnell, of pneumonia as a result of exposure.

Toddling after his work-bound father, Gerald stopped to play about the 250-foot drill hole yesterday morning. Its maximum diameter is about a foot. He fell in and with his knees doubled up and his arms pinned above his head, wedged twenty feet down. There he remained until volunteers and miners of the Tri-State lead and zinc district got him out after a frantic battle to pierce solid rock.

Storm Interrupts Electric Service

March Departed From Kingston in a Gale of Wind and a Heavy Rain Storm That Interrupted House Lighting Services in Some Sections.

The month of March departed for another year in a gale of wind and a heavy rain storm which interrupted house lighting service in various parts of the city, where electric light wires were blown down by the heavy wind. The Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corporation had its trouble men out and the damage to wires was soon repaired and service restored.

Four wires were carried down at Montrepose avenue and West Chestnut street, interrupting service in that section until repairs were made. Householders who had candles lit them while others were fortunate enough to have oil lamps which they used. In that vicinity service was interrupted twice during the evening.

Wires were also carried down on Hurley avenue, interrupting house service in that locality. The same condition prevailed on Lucas avenue.

The street lighting circuits, however, were not damaged and there was no suspension of service.

Slide Blocked Saugerties Road

Another slide occurred Thursday along the Kingston-Saugerties highway at Glenerie. A quantity of clay and mud slid down the bank and covered the north traffic lane. Watchmen were stationed to warn traffic of the condition and work of clearing up the slide was commenced. The slide was caused by the heavy rain and melting snow along the new highway which was constructed last season.

Treasury Receipts.

Washington, Apr. 1 (AP)—Treasury receipts for March 26 were $105,845,347.73; expenditures $109,733,824.58; balance $672,668,965.77. Customs duties for 30 days of March were $22,631,544.46.

Ufer And O'Rourke Were Sentenced To Dannemora Prison

Two Youths Who Broke Jail Sentenced to Clinton State Prison From 10 to 15 Years Apiece—Others Sentenced.

Dixon Ufer and Samuel Michael O'Rourke on Thursday afternoon found that it did not pay to conflict with the laws of the country and particularly that it did not pay to come in contact with law enforcement officers while confined in a county jail. Late Thursday afternoon Judge Ellis J. Staley sentenced Ufer and O'Rourke to Clinton State Prison at Dannemora for terms the minimum of which shall be 10 years and the maximum not more than 15 years.

Judge Staley in sentencing the youths said that it was discretionary with the court as to what might be done with men of their age, he was permitted by law to send them to a reformatory instead of prison if he saw fit, but in his opinion the two had started out on a "carnival of crime" and he did not believe that their career justified any leniency on the part of the court. Their crime had been a most brutal one, they had deliberately beaten an officer of the law in an effort to gain freedom. Fortunately they were facing the court with a charge of robbery hanging over them instead of a more serious one, the penalty of which might have been payment of their own lives. He said that he believed the only thing to do was to place them in a situation where they would no longer be a menace to society and he consequently sent them to prison.

District Attorney Cleon B. Murray then moved judgment in the case of The People vs. Clinton Wilson, a colored man who had pled guilty to the charge of assault, second degree. Judge Staley sentenced Wilson to a term at hard labor in Clinton State Prison at Dannemora for an indeterminate term the minimum of which shall be two years and the maximum 3½ years.

After sentence had been pronounced the Judge directed that the prisoners be taken immediately from the court room. They were removed under heavy guard and will be taken to Dannemora.

Ufer and O'Rourke were sentenced for the part they took in the brutal beating of Night Jailer Ludlow Post on March 13 when they robbed him and escaped from jail after taking his keys and releasing Samuel Klein, a fellow prisoner who was shot and killed in his attempt to escape. Klein was a fourth offender and would have been given a life sentence under the Baumes law.

Court adjourned after the jurors had been paid for their service and mileage by the Clerk.

In adjourning court Judge Staley thanked Clerk James A. Simpson for his courteous and efficient services during the term and also the court officers and members of the bar for their cooperation.

MOTION PICTURE DIRECTOR ARRESTED FOR TAX EVASION

Los Angeles, April 1 (AP).—Arrested on a secret indictment charging evasion of payment of $108,547.20 in income tax, Edwin Carewe, once a leading motion picture director, was at liberty under $5,000 bond today while deputy United States marshals sought G. Wallace Forge, Hollywood income tax adviser, who they assert aided Carewe in making his returns.

Carewe was indicted on four counts for evasions which allegedly took place over a four year period.

Plumbers Without Work, But Strike Anyway In City

Local Plumbers' Union Fail to Come to Any Agreement With Master Plumbers on Wage Scale—Sought to Retain $10 a Day Scale; Offered $7.

A rather out of the way state of affairs exists among the local plumbers of Kingston who have been without work practically all winter for even though not working they have struck to retain the old wage scale of $10 a day. The old wage scale expired Thursday night, and the plumbers have failed to sign the new wage scale offered them by the master plumbers of $7 a day, reduction of 30 per cent in the wage scale.

Several weeks ago the local plumbers forwarded to the master plumbers the proposed new wage scale at the existing rate of $10 a day. The master plumbers replied by submitting a proposed wage scale of $7 a day.

It is understood that the master plumbers submitted a $7 a day scale under the impression that the plumbers would get together with them and come to some agreement. Nothing was done, however, and the matter drifted along until Thursday when the old wage scale agreement expired.

It is said that the last week only about five of the members of the local plumbers' union had work. It is likely that as soon as the plumbing business picks up the master plumbers and the union plumbers will come to some agreement as to a wage scale.

Serious Floods May Cover New York State

Albany, N. Y., April 1 (AP)—Serious floods in Washington county, east of Glens Falls, and rising waters in Onondaga county had resulted today from heavy rains on top of the deep snow which fell over Eastern New York early in the week.

The lowlands in the vicinity of Granville and Salem, in Washington county, were under deepening waters and scores of families had been driven from their homes. At Granville the Mettowee river rose eight feet in less than seven hours last night and families and business establishments in the street bordering the river were forced to the second floors of buildings.

The state highway between Salem and Granville was reported under five feet of water. At Salem White Creek rose 14 inches in 20 minutes last night.

This section was the scene of disastrous floods in 1927, at the time of the Vermont catastrophe.

Syracuse reported the Onondaga creek had overflowed its banks in low places and that there was a threat of flood danger by noon today if the water kept rising.

The eastern half of New York was blanketed under seven to 20 inches of snow early this week.

Democratic "Joan of Arc" Starts a Rumpus

Minneapolis, April 1 (AP).—A gray-haired, middle-aged woman today said "no" and with that vanished hope of reuniting Minnesota Democrats before the party's national convention at Chicago in June.

Her decision made certain that two full slates of delegates from the state will compete for seats at the meeting to nominate the party's candidate for president. And knocking at the convention door at the head of one slate seeking admittance will be the woman, Mrs. Ruth Haynes Carpenter.

When the party's state convention was held early in March and delegates instructed to support Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York were chosen, Mrs. Carpenter started a bolt of dissenters.

She accused "regulars" of having packed the convention by secretly increasing the membership of the state central committee from less than 100 to 260, selecting only Roosevelt supporters, and giving each a vote in the convention.

In twenty minutes she organized a rump convention which selected another slate of delegates without instructing them although Mrs. Carpenter and most of her followers are potential supporters of former Governor Alfred E. Smith. Her supporters began calling her the "Joan of Arc of the Party."

She announced that a brief which contested seating of the Roosevelt delegates has been forwarded to the National Democratic Committee.

Preservation of the party's identity in the state is one of her announced aims. She accuses the "regular" group of preparing to agree to trade Democratic support for state candidates of the Farmer-Labor party for Farmer-Labor support of Roosevelt if he is nominated. To block such a step, her group purposes to present a ticket of Democratic candidates.

GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT SIGNS CATSKILL-HUDSON BRIDGE BILL

Governor Roosevelt on Thursday signed the bridge authority bill, which assures the big $3,000,000 Catskill-Hudson bridge project. It is expected that actual construction work on the bridge will be started this summer.

Signs Bill Calling For Referendum On $30,000,000 In Bonds

Albany, N. Y., April 1 (AP)—Governor Roosevelt today signed a bill calling for a referendum on a $30,000,000 bond issue, the funds to be used for the relief of unemployment in New York state for the remainder of this year and all of 1933.

The proposed bond issue will be submitted to the voters at the general election next November. If the referendum is favorable the funds will be available on November 15.

The emergency unemployment relief commission, created at a special session of the legislature last September, would administer the expenditure of the $30,000,000. The commission already has received $25,000,000 for unemployment relief. Under the New York relief plan money is spent in two ways, for wages to temporary workers and as direct contributions in the form of food, clothing, rentals and medical attention. Counties and municipalities are called upon, in order to receive state aid, to match funds received from the state.

The last session of the Legislature voted an appropriation of $5,000,000 to finance unemployment relief during the spring, summer and early fall months. If the $30,000,000 bond issue should be rejected at the polls, New York's distress relief campaign would end next fall unless a special session of the Legislature was called to find another source of revenue.

The governor also signed the legislative measure appropriating the $5,000,000 to carry on relief work among unemployed until next November.

Mr. Roosevelt signed today 33 measures and vetoed eight. Among those he approved was one authorizing the construction of a highway bridge over the Hudson river near Hudson on the east bank and Catskill on the west side. The bridge will be financed by the sale of bonds. This act also creates a bridge authority to build and control the bridge and issue the bonds.

SPEECH BY REV. DR. WARREN DISPLEASES MINISTERS

The Rev. Dr. Benjamin Clark Warren, aged 72, who was pastor of St. James Church, Kingston in 1897-1898 and later was stationed at Poughkeepsie and Newburgh, told "the inside story of Methodism" much to the distaste of clergymen attending the New York Annual Conference of Methodist ministers, recently. Dr. Warren, finishing 50 years of service in the ministry, having retired from the pastorate at Cold Spring, N. Y., asked the convention to take away the powers of bishops, who, he said, can shunt ministers off into unimportant pastorates because of their teachings, writings and preachings. He spoke for nearly an hour before being interrupted by a clergyman who asked that he be called to a point of order. Considerable controversy followed.

FOUR ELECTROCUTED AT SING SING THURSDAY.

Ossining, N. Y., April 1 (AP).—Execution by wholesale subtracted four killers from Sing Sing's death house population last night.

Peter Sardini, who gave authorities "inside dope" on six unsolved murders in a vain attempt to win life, was the first to go. He nodded to Warden Lewis E. Lawes and said "Goodbye, warden."

Dominic Scifo, 24, Walter Borowski, 24, and Michael Rodiack, 20, followed in quick succession, praying but saying nothing to jailers. The four electrocutions took 20 minutes. It was the first quadruple execution in seven years.

The four men committed murders during holdups in New York.

BED CAUGHT FIRE AND POLICE WERE CALLED

Shortly after 2 o'clock this morning the police department received a call from a rooming house at 20 Franklin street. When Officers Roedell and Simon Wood arrived they found that Frank Donovan, a boarder, had been smoking in bed and in some manner a spark had ignited the bed clothing. The mattress had been hurled out of a window and quiet was restored before the police arrived.

Ulster County Bar Pays Tribute To John W. Eckert

Judge Clearwater, Judge Hasbrouck, Senator Walton, Surrogate Kaufman, County Attorney Groves, Attorney Cook and Attorney Flemming Pay Final Tributes to Outstanding Member of Local Bar in Supreme Court Before Justice Staley.

At the opening of the trial term of the supreme court Thursday morning Judge Clearwater, chairman of the committee of the bar to prepare and present a tribute to John W. Eckert, with much emotion presented the tribute which he had prepared and which was adopted at the meeting of the Bar preceding Mr. Eckert's funeral last Friday.

The Judge said it was too much the custom of humanity to withhold the bestowal of wreaths of Amaranth and to wait until the only suitable floral offering was a garland of Asphodel, the offering the Greeks placed upon the coffin of the illustrious dead. He said his heart was too full to make an extended address, he would only add to the tribute of the Bar that great tribute of Virgil, "Semper Honos Nomenque Tuum Laudesque Manebunt." (Your Honor, Your Name and Your Fame Ever Shall Remain).

The Judge asked that the tribute of the Bar and those which might be offered be entered in full upon the minutes of the court.

When Judge Clearwater had concluded H. H. Flemming addressed the court. Mr. Flemming said he had known John W. Eckert as a boy, even before he came to Kingston from Phoenicia. Being at that time connected with the Ulster & Delaware Railroad he had frequently made business trips along the line and visited Phoenicia. There he learned of John W. Eckert and frequently came in contact with him and from that time a friendship had continued. Later when Mr. Eckert had been admitted to the bar it had been his privilege to be associated with Mr. Eckert in the trial of actions, both with him and against him and in all of those contacts he had found Mr. Eckert to be a real friend, a honest and conscientious worker and deeply interested in his clients' welfare.

Little more could be said in the way of tribute than had been said and perhaps the greatest tribute which could be paid was that which had been paid Mr. Eckert by the community last week on the day of the funeral. On that day the place which Mr. Eckert held in the community was very evident, people from all sections of Kingston and throughout the county had come to pay their last respects to a great man and this feeling in the community was a fine tribute to deceased. Mr. Eckert's wonderful personality had won for him in all sections of the state staunch friends for he was the type of man people loved to meet. Mr. Flemming spoke of the place which Mr. Eckert occupied in the community and as a member of the Bar. In the death of Mr. Eckert he said the Ulster County Bar had lost a valued member and a member whose place could not be filled.

Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck next addressed the court. He spoke of his relations with Mr. Eckert and referred to litigation where Mr. Eckert had been opposed to him. He spoke of the condemnation proceedings involving the taking of lands for the Rondout Creek Bridge and paid a very glowing tribute to Mr. Eckert's ability as a lawyer and the seriousness and earnestness with which he carried that litigation in the interest of the county of Ulster. Throughout that litigation Judge Hasbrouck said Mr. Eckert put forth the best that was in him, he displayed unusual resourcefulness in the defense of the action and put up a defense such as no one could have excelled. "I conceived an admiration for John W. Eckert and at the time of his death was one of his substantial friends and I hope he was one of mine."

Continuing Judge Hasbrouck said.

May it please Your Honor, and Gentlemen of the Bar:

Spring has come but the joy of it to us has been quite effaced. A pall has fallen over our city, county and the wider places where those resided who knew, respected, admired and loved John W. Eckert.

In the fifty years that I have known the bar of Ulster county no such universal sense of loss has been felt over the passing of any member as in his death. It is rare indeed that one so accomplished could contend so strenuously as he for the clients he represented, and there were a host of them, against able resourceful men in the profession and leave so little sense of animosity among his antagonists. For this there was a reason. It was not that he was resourceful and learned in the law, facile princeps in the practice of it. It was that in his professional effort he was the incarnation of earnestness.

He lost himself in his cause. He subordinated his personality. So that those who contended with him knew that what he exhibited in his earnestness was not a fault meant to be offensive, but was a virtue to be emulated and commended. This earnestness which was so great virtue was at the same time carried to

Dead from Drinking 'Radium Water' Tonic

New York, April 1 (AP)—Eben MacBurney Byers' death from radium poisoning spurred the medical examiners' office to start an inquiry today.

With his bones breaking down under an agonizing battering of alpha particles, the wealthy Pittsburgh iron manufacturer and internationally known sportsman, died yesterday.

Dr. Frederick B. Flinn, radium expert of Columbia University, said death resulted from drinking "a widely advertised radium water" as a tonic.

Dr. Raymond B. Miles, assistant medical examiner, was to perform an autopsy today to trace in detail the effect of radium salts contained in the water.

Last September Dr. Joseph M. Steiner, New York specialist, had told the Trade Commission in Washington that Mr. Byers would die of a brain abscess resulting from radium.

Byers, at a hearing held last September at his home because he was too ill to move, testified he drank 1,400 bottles of a product known as "Radithor". Later the commission forbade the Bailey Radium Laboratories, Inc., of East Orange, N. J., from advertising their product "Radithor" as harmless.

Physicians pointed out the case was not to be confused with the use of radium in cancer treatment. In the latter cases the radium is not used internally.

Report Senate Will Stop Bonus Bill

Washington, April 1 (AP).—The Senate which will have the next and the last say on taxes, appropriations and bonus payments is on an economy rampage.

In the spirit now pervading this chamber, the appropriation bills are due for a drastic slash, some of the higher income taxes voted by the House are facing a paring down and the bonus bill is doomed to defeat.

So far two of the annual supply bills have been sent back to the appropriations committee for 10 per cent reductions. All the other measures appropriating funds for next year's operating expenses of the government face the same treatment.

As a result of this unprecedented action, the Senate appropriations committee is making time on the other necessary appropriation bills. Department heads have been notified to give recommendations for further paring down.

It is no secret that the leaders of both parties have determined to apply the axe to the proposition about to face the House for legislation to authorize loans as payment in full to World War veterans upon their bonus insurance certificates.

Agents Seize Truck Loaded With Beer

Frank Marrelli was arraigned before Commissioner A. C. Connelly Thursday afternoon, charged by Kingston prohibition agents with sale of alleged apple whiskey at 19 Converse street and with possession of whiskey, wine and home brew. He waived examination and was held in $1,500 bail for appearance in federal court.

On 9-W near Port Ewen this morning the agents seized a truck loaded with 20 halves of beer. Nelson Cantine of Lomontville was arrested and held at the Ulster county jail for arraignment later.

At Lithgow Thursday the "Log Cabin Rest" yielded alleged whiskey, ale and beer. William C. Baldwin was arrested and held for arraignment before Commissioner Platt in Poughkeepsie today.

Lights of NEW YORK

By WALTER TRUMBULL

Julian Street has been qualifying for the Explorers club. He recently discovered New York. True, Mr. Street has been a man of Manhattan for years past but this was another city. It was the New York of the dawn age. Because of an early operation on a member of his family, Mr. Street was obliged to reach the hospital by 6 a. m. Knowing the night before that he was to make the trip, he conferred with Mrs. Street as to transportation.

"Take a taxi," she said.

"Don't be silly," he responded. "What would a taxi be doing out at that hour?"

"I think there will be taxis," said Mrs. Street, "but, of course, one could always charter a milk wagon."

Emerging from his door a few moments before six, Mr. Street found a New York he did not know. The air smelled crisp and clean, free of gasoline fumes. The voice of the city was still. But there was a taxi.

Mr. Street now believes the taxi was driven by a man training for the motor races on the Indianapolis speedway. The streets apparently were empty and the driver took full advantage of the fact. Mr. Street maintains that through the window he saw what appeared to be one of those movies, where they speed up the film, of a deserted village. He thinks they passed other taxis; it was just like two limited trains passing in opposite directions, if the engines had cut loose from the cars and were going right along without them. He saw some objects he opines might have been milk wagons, and claims he heard the voice of a newsboy, blown away by the rushing air. He thinks a railroad station or hotel flashed past, but isn't sure, as he was too busy hanging on and yelling at the driver. But it was very bracing. Mr. Street still insists we all should rise early in the morning and see the city free from traffic. It would be a great hour for a walk, he maintains.

It was Willard Fairchild who discovered the horse and sleigh. This was in the hills of Connecticut at a village which has no railroad station and plenty of snow. The horse and sleigh belonged to a farmer, who before trusting the outfit to Mr. Fairchild, asked him whether he was an experienced driver. Mr. Fairchild assured the farmer he had been around with horses a great deal, but neglected to mention that it had been with the artillery during the war, when he rode the caisson and others handled the horses. Still, all went well. Mr. Fairchild got his family into the sleigh and when the farmer handed him the reins clucked in the approved fashion, which apparently threw the animal into first speed, and away they went. The horse took them for a very nice ride and brought them back safely. It was then that the difficulty developed.

The farmer wasn't around, but his small boy said his father had told him to ask Mr. Fairchild just to unhitch the horse and tie him up in the stall in the barn. It seems that when you stood alongside this horse, it seemed about the size of a small elephant, which made some of the buckles and things hard to reach. But Mr. Fairchild undid them all, except that he kept the bridle and reins intact. When he had managed to get the horse out of the shafts and all the other straps and things off the horse, he realized he never had known how many parts there were to one horse's harness. Taking the reins into the barn, he passed them around a post at a corner of the stall. Then, by walking away with them—a good deal as you might hoist a mainsail—he pulled the horse into shelter without taking a chance of being stepped on. That was a smart idea, as when the horse reached the post, it automatically put on the brakes. This accomplished, Mr. Fairchild, who was now out in the yard, returned to the barn. Being careful to permit no slack, he wound the reins half a dozen times around the post and tied a good firm knot. He then went out again and collected the pieces of harness and laid them on the floor under some pegs, where other harness was hanging. He had paid the farmer in advance, so he didn't wait for him to come back. But he knows the old chap will be pleased at all the care he took to leave his property in good order. A lot of city fellows might not have taken so much trouble with things.

New York.—When passion burns Frederick Meder, twenty-four, it burns.

He just can't keep his love for Paula Reithmayer, nurse, to himself.

Back in West Side court, he was charged with violating a suspended sentence given him two months ago, by phoning Paula as often as twenty times a day to demand marriage. The previous time he was arrested after tricking his way into Paula's apartment wearing a false mustache.

Magistrate Irwin held him in $100 bail.

Decrease In Average Size Of U. S. Families Laid To High Cost Of Rearing City Children

(Editor's Note: When America was young her frontiers bred large families because they were necessary. Now America has become "citified" and families are becoming smaller. What this means is discussed in this, the second of three articles showing how America likely will have a stationary population in 1969.)

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE.

Washington (AP).—The high cost of raising children in the cities is now worrying economists as well as urban parents.

For this cost, say those economists apprehensive over the problem of gauging mass production to a prospective stationary population, is probably the major cause of a swiftly declining birth-rate.

The trend to a stationary, or decreasing, population is manifest, they assert, not only in the United States but almost everywhere in the Occident.

Dr. Oliver E. Baker, economist of the department of agriculture whose specialty is the relation of population to land utilization, says the decline is definitely associated with industrial development and city life.

As the chief reason for the relative scarcity of children in the cities he cites a recent survey made by an insurance company which showed that it cost about $5,000 to raise a city child to the age of 18 for a family with an income of $2,500 a year.

"It requires about three children a family to maintain even a stationary population, and it appears for a typical American urban family to raise three children will cost $25,000 to $30,000," he said.

Dr. Baker points out that urban conditions of living very often are not favorable to family life. In the urban industrial system there is little place for the child and almost no place for the aged, while the wife tends to become either a factory or an office worker.

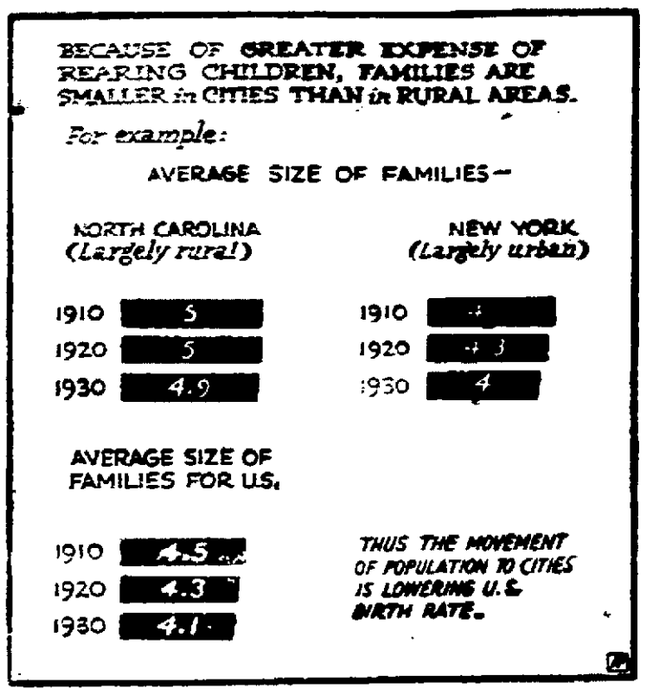

In many cases, the individual, not the family, is the economic unit.

On the other hand, not only can the child be raised more cheaply on the farm, but also in most cases he is an economic unit from 10 years of age onward, while the wife is an economic necessity and co-worker. Even the aged find much they can do on the farm.

Preliminary figures indicate there were about 150,000 fewer births in 1931 than in 1930. The decline of births in a year of economic depression, Dr. Baker says, apparently was two to three times as large as the average annual decline during the preceding decade of urban prosperity.

Some hope of retarding, if not stopping, the decline is afforded by the movement of professional and business men and of factory workers to suburban places and small farms.

The prospect at present, he says, is for an increase of this movement, but as yet the influence on the birthrate is not large.

The chart above shows how America's families are growing smaller, a fact attributed by economists to the high cost of rearing children in cities.

ervices Held at Home for the Aged ring the month of March six ial programs were held at the e for the Aged two of which e social. Early in the month s Lucy Berryan and her Sunday ool class put on an interesting ogram at the home and at the close ed ice cream and delicious home cake. The other social was the birthday party at which games were played and refreshments served. There was a birthday cake.

Four religious services were held at The Home. The Young Circle under the direction of Miss Dénsen gave an interesting program, and an orchestra furnished music and one of the young men sang several negro spirituals.

Not All Chinese "Coolies"

The original coolies were unskilled laborers from China, India and the Orient in general who first were imported into western countries under contracts according to which they bound themselves at a low wage to certain term of service, at the end of which they were entitled to free passage back to their native land, says Pathfinder Magazine. The name is believed to be derived from Chinese "kuli," meaning strength, and "lee," to hire. Hence a coolie was a hired laborer. During the decade between 1850 and 1860 more than 40,000 Chinese coolies were imported into California. It is incorrect to refer to Chinese immigrants in general as coolies.

Horn and Trumpet Long Used to Direct Armies

According to the best authorities, it appears that the forerunners of the modern trumpet and bugle were first used for military purposes by the armies of Gideon and Saul of Biblical fame. The Romans appear in the scene next, some prior to the fall of the Roman empire, about 476 A. D. the musical instruments used in the Roman army were the bugle (buccina), the trumpet (tuba), the cavalry trumpet (lituus) and the horn (cornu). The latter was made of the horn of the buffalo, and provided with a silver mouthpiece. The others were probably of brass.

The Romans knew very well a fact familiar to modern tactics, that to carry a command amid the result of battle or down a long line of march, the penetrating notes of a brazen horn are much more effective than the sound of the human voice. According to the signals for the various evolutions of march and battle were given by horn and trumpet; first by the horn, at the command of the general, then taken up by the trumpets. The horn was used to sound the divisions of the day, that is to say reveille, noon and nightfall.—United States Recruiting News.

Massachusetts Held as Nation's Apple Nursery

Massachusetts is the cradle of American horticulture, according to records in the division of horticulture at the Massachusetts State college. Studies conducted at various times by the college fruit specialists indicate that a total of 142 named varieties of apples have been developed in that state by fruit growers and breeders.

Of those the Baldwin apple probably is the most prominent today. This apple originated in Wilmington about the year 1740, so far as can be determined from old records, and today constitutes the principal variety in New England commercial orchards. Hubbardston is a variety which takes its name from the town in which it was originated approximately 100 years ago.

Benoni, mother, fall orange, roxbury russet, and Tolman sweet are other Massachusetts bred varieties that are still prominent today.

The oldest planted fruit tree in America is a pear tree between Danvers and Salem on the farm once owned by Gov. John Endicott. There is some evidence to indicate that the tree was brought over from England in 1630 by Governor Winthrop.

MORE BONUS PAYMENTS.

Demands for full cash payment of the soldiers' bonus are said to be growing stronger. Thus the fiscal and political troubles of Congress and President accumulate. Last year more than $1,000,000,000 was paid to the World War veterans in so-called loans on their "adjusted compensation" certificates, bringing the cash payments up to 50 per cent of the certificates' ultimate value. The other 50 per cent would not be payable normally until their legal maturity in 1945. To pay them in full now, it is estimated, would cost about $2,000,000,000.

Those of the veterans who understand financial and business matters will do well to think very seriously about whether the government, already in the red about $2,000,000,000 for the last couple of years, and running in deeper every minute at a rate unprecedented in peace time, could stand another such drain on its empty treasury.

The government, no doubt, could borrow the money and pay the bonus. But what would be the effect on government credit, and on all forms of private credit that are based on government credit, and on general business whose life blood is credit? As for such payments tending to restore business prosperity, few thinking people believe in such miracles any longer. It did not work last year.

COLONIZING MANCHURIA.

Tokio reports a big plan to colonize Manchuria. It may be recalled that Japan sent an army into that populous and rich province merely to protect Japanese lives and property, with no desire to challenge China's territorial rights. Nothing more is said about that, since Japan set up a dummy government of her own under the royal weakling, Pu-Yi.

Japan's present civilian representation in Manchuria is only 250,000 out of 30,000,000, about one Jap to 120 Chinese. To hold the country she needs more. There is talk of sending 5,000,000 Japanese settlers in the next 10 years, in annual installments of half a million.

Such a rate would vastly exceed anything that Japan has ever done in the way of colonization. She has tried to settle her people in Korea and Formosa, since taking those countries as a result of her war against China in 1895. Her success, after more than 30 years of opportunity, is shown by only one Japanese out of 20 inhabitants in Korea and one out of 23 in Formosa. Japs are good business men but poor settlers.

She may be more successful in Manchuria, because the plan is largely military. The colonization plans are being made by the Japanese Reservists Association, a powerful body of war veterans and reserve forces. They are to move in themselves, and dominate the whole migration. Will they buy the property, or confiscate it from the Chinese owners? It looks very much as if farms are to be distributed as a military bonus.

FOREIGN IMPROVEMENT.

Conditions look a little better abroad. The word from Berlin is that Germany is balancing her budget at $2,000,000,000, having cut it down in two successive years from $2,700,000,000 and $2,500,000,000 to that figure.

Silas H. Strawn, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, back from Europe, says the situation in France and England is improved. In Paris, business at last is "facing realities." The English people are actually "cocky" over their success in balancing their public budgets by heavy taxes and drastic reductions in expenditure.

This is good news, and a good example, for the United States. One thing they seem to be doing over there more effectually than we have yet had the courage to do is to eliminate public extravagance as ruthlessly as private extravagance. We shall come to that in time. We shall have to, if we want to regain prosperity.

Most Americans latterly have regarded the Irish question as settled and have not taken De Valera very seriously. It now appears that De Valera must be taken seriously, and the Irish question is still very far from settlement. Americans, however, are not getting excited about the situation as they used to do in such cases. The effect on our general public is rather melancholy. Here is another trouble for the world, and especially for two transatlantic friends, when there was already trouble enough. There is sympathy here for free aspirations, as always, but there is also more sympathy for the English people than there used to be. If the English and Irish could only get along together in peace! And if Ireland could only dwell contentedly in local freedom, under the aegis of the British Empire, as Irishmen and Englishmen together do in Canada, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand!

FAT MAKES FAT

While it is generally agreed that starches, potatoes, bread, and sugar, are the big factor in putting on fat, it is very often forgotten that the fats themselves are also a big factor, not only in putting on weight but in preventing loss of weight.

Did you ever think that in trying to build up youngsters, increasing their weight, it is not so much the starches that are used but the fats—cream, milk, butter, and other fats. These fats, together with meats and leafy vegetables to give plenty of minerals and vitamins, build up youngsters and keep them built up, better than large amounts of starchy foods.

Now as these fats are so helpful to build up, and maintain the strength of the youngsters, why should they not be used to keep up the strength of overweight individuals? Because fats have more than twice the heating power or energy producing power of starches and meats.

Dr. L. Jean Bogart reminds those who are overweight that they should watch even the small portions of fat carefully. Such persons seem to have firmly fixed in their minds the rule that "sugar makes fat" but forget that fat makes fat at 2¼ times the rate that sugar does. One will never reduce weight by cutting out all the sugars and eating fairly freely of fats. Reduction diets should contain small amounts of both starches and fat.

Dr. Bogert suggests that to reduce safely the overweight individual should: Use small amounts of butter; drink skim milk and buttermilk; omit bacon, fat meats, pastries, and rich desserts entirely; substitute small amounts of French dressing, vinegar or lemon juice alone or mayonnaise or other rich salad dressing.

It is well to remember that the use of a little fat is advised because when eaten with other foods such as meat and eggs, the entire lot of food in the stomach does not move out into the intestine so rapidly, sometimes taking one or two hours more than if the meat and eggs were eaten alone.

This means that the individual will not feel so hungry at the next meal hour and less food will be eaten.

The point then to remember is that fat makes fat and so only a small quantity should be eaten, just enough to prevent extreme hunger and thus overeating.

THREE PINK ROSEBUDS

"I TOLD Di me could get along without her. She had something else on this afternoon," Marge had explained casually.

She had produced a long list of names. "Your mother made it out, Gar. I ran into her at the Century Club yesterday and she asked me if she could help us. Wasn't that dear of her when she's so busy? She said a lot of nice things about what we're doing. She's going to give a theater party the first night. That'll make splendid publicity. Oh, speaking of publicity—I'm going to ask the Times to send that Dorcas Tabor over to get a feature story of the whole thing. It'll run well—all about the theater and who's really back of it and who's in the first cast and Somerset and everything."

"Good idea!" Gar had responded promptly. But he had been thinking how stunning Marge looked in the thing she was wearing, whatever it was. She looked like the favorite in a harem, he had played with that fancy while Marge was talking.

He had been lounging comfortably against the rose damask cushions of the divan, his feet stretched out toward the fire.

"I've got to do something about Somerset, Gar," she had said slowly. "He's—well, he's taking too much for granted. But I can't offend him, just now. I wish you'd sort of stick around. If you'd go to the rehearsals—"

"The big bounder! Why didn't you say something about it before? You bet I'll stick 'round. He has his nerve!"

Marge had sighed faintly. Her hand had reached out and tucked itself under Gar's arm. He was always completely at home in Marge's sitting room, pleasantly conscious of its luxury, of its seclusion, of the privilege that was his in so enjoying it.

She had told him of the progress the Players were making. The costumes had been ordered from New York. He must see what Gordon Wing was doing with the back drop for the first act—it was perfect! Her low voice had run on and on from one thing to another, while Gar had listened and watched the little play of muscles under the fine skin of her throat.

"Gar, I had a wonderful talk with your mother, about you. Of course she'd say things to me that she wouldn't say to anyone else because she knows what friends you and I have been. She was so sweet I just opened my heart to her. I told her—well, I'm not going to tell you what I told her. You would have guessed it a long time ago except that you're so blind—"

"You're going to tell me, Marge!" Gar had asserted masterfully. "Shoot!"

She had shaken her head; she had leaned a little closer to his shoulder, her face bent away from him. When she answered there had been a suggestion of tears in her faltering voice.

"But there isn't any use, now. You're married Kitty. And you've spoiled me for anyone else. It's always been like that—that's the way I felt last winter when I came out. I didn't give a hang about any of the parties when you weren't going to be there. Oh—" She stirred restlessly. "I hate everything now! I'm sick of the crowd, of all this fuss over the theater. I'm going away from Winton this spring and I'm never coming back. I think I'll live in Paris all the rest of my life. Will you miss me, Gar?"

Gar had been touched by her confession, flattered. "I'll go after you and bring you back," he had answered quickly, vehemently. He had put his arm about her shoulder and kissed her. "Gosh, Marge, I'd miss you a lot! You can't go away!"

"Would you?" she had whispered against his arm.

He had straightened, smiling down at her.

"To prove that I think of you I sent you some flowers to-day—"

"Oh! Selby told me there were flowers—I haven't opened the box; I thought they were from Somerset. How dear of you, Gar!"

"I didn't put in a card. I wanted to see if you remembered our old nonsense. The three pink rosebuds—"

"Gar! How cute—that you remember. 'I—love—you' It wasn't nonsense—last winter, Gar!" Then she had drawn quickly away from him, pulled a cord that released a bright circle of light from a lamp at the end of the divan. She had flung back her shoulders, dramatically. "We're crazy, Gar, talking like this—"

A clock somewhere had chimed seven.

"Good gracious, I didn't dream it was so late!" Gar had sprung to his feet. "I've got to beat it. You can depend on me, Marge—about Somerset. And forget that going away stuff."

"Thanks, Gar." Her voice had been sweet, a little plaintive.

Driving home Gar had frowned heavily, thinking of Somerset's presuming on any intimacy with Marge. He'd show him where he got off! It did not occur to him that Marge could have done that herself, weeks ago. He was all chivalry, all affection for Marge. What if she did go away to live in Paris?

But he had forgotten that alarm when he reached home. Kitty and her eager hungry embrace had met him at the door.

"You're going to wear your corsage, aren't you?"

"Of course. It's in the ice-box. It's lovely, Gar."

"Well, so are you."

"Do I look all right?"

"Beautiful. You're getting class, Kit. What are you doing? What beauty parlor are you going to? First thing I know I'll see your picture on some ad for cold cream or powder."

Kitty laughed lightheartedly. Gar's easy praise was intoxicating to her; she needed no new dress, she needed no artificial color on cheeks or lips. She brought the corsage to him to pin on to her shoulder.

"The devil!" Gar cried, laughing suddenly. "That isn't what I ordered for you—those three pink rosebuds. I told that fellow I wanted orchids."

"But I love these, Gar. And orchids are so frightfully expensive."

Gar laughed again. "Not when I'm sending them to you."

They met the others at the Rainbow Gardens. They went there frequently; the head waiter always greeted them with particular concern that they should have the table they wanted. Often Kitty, following Gar into the crowd, thought of Josie, looked for her among the dancers and at the tables. She told Tubby much about Josie, and Tubby had laughed with her, but not at Josie, and she had liked him better for that.

There were to be ten of them tonight, at a long table. Diana came with Buck Sewall, Red came alone, Tubby with Isobel Peters, others joined them. Tubby took the chair next to Kitty and began whispering in her ear.

"Say, you look out of sight tonight."

"Tubby, this old dress. You see me in it every time I go anywhere!"

"I thought it was a new one, honest."

"You're silly."

But she warmed to his nonsense. Tubby amused her with his devotion, his clumsy humor. She felt at ease with him. With the others, at times like this, it was like playing a part in a play, the role of which she knew well, now.

Gar was at the other end of the table. He had kept the chair next to him empty. He was watching the door. Presently he sprang to his feet. "Here's Marge."

Marge approached the table with Paul Somerset. The others hailed her coming a little boisterously.

It was Gar, not Somerset, who took Marge's evening coat from her shoulders. "Sit here," he commanded, indicating the unoccupied chair next to him. It left one for Somerset across the table. "I'm on the job," he added in a low tone.

Marge lifted a deeply reproachful look to him as she slipped into the seat he had saved for her. Her fingers went significantly to the orchids against her shoulder. Her eyes traveled swiftly down the table and met Kitty's wide startled glance fixed on her. She laughed softly, her lips scarcely parting over the sound.

At their end of the table Tubby was deep in a story which he was pouring into Kitty's ear. All at once he became aware that she was not listening. He thought she spoke.

"What'd you say, Kitty?"

She turned back to him, her eyes blue-black, a heightened color on her cheeks. "Did I say anything? If I did—it was only that it was just silly, thinking it for a moment—"

"But what I'm telling you is gospel truth, Kit! It happened—to a fellow I know."

WEST SHOKAN.

West Shokan, March 31.—This section shared heavily in the general damage wrought by Monday's blizzard. The fall of the heavy snow and sleet packed down to the depth of eight inches. Had the snow been loose, the depth would doubtless have been a foot or more. As it is the roads are drifted badly in places and everywhere the traveling is very heavy. Four foot drifts are deposited in Traver Hollow, and the road leading to Assessor Martin J. Every's place is drifted full. This occurred while he was endeavoring to reach Kingston for jury duty Monday and since he has been obliged to leave his car at the foot of the Traver Hollow hill. Monday night some miscreant endeavored to open the car door and wrenched the lock so badly that Mr. Every was obliged to walk back home Tuesday morning and call the Ashokan Garage for assistance to open the car door. Of course, Mr. Every could not be led to believe that anyone was trying to make a get-away with his car, but rather that some unfortunate person caught out in the storm was trying to unlock the door to get inside out of the cold.

All outside telephone service is cut off, local calls are, however, not so seriously affected, although quite a number of 'phones are dead. The private line to Dolan's residence at West Shokan Heights went down at John Jordan's corner, under the weight of the snow and ice. There are few radio aerials hereabouts that did not go down. At Hickory Hill a heavy loss was sustained by Mr. Weidner, who lost the greater part of 3,000 eggs hatching in his electric incubator. Some of the eggs were salvaged by transferring to his old type hatchers.

Ploughing and scraping roads was the order of the day on Tuesday, which gave emergency employment to a number of men and teams. Charles Hesley and Elwyn Davis opened the road over West Shokan Heights.

A camping party composed of several young men from the big city came up to enjoy the balmy Easter week, camping in Watson Hollow. They found, however, Sunday night that they certainly had misjudged the weather, and three o'clock Monday morning William Colange was awakened by two of the young chaps, who wet and bedraggled came to seek shelter from the storm. They were lucky indeed to find comfortable quarters in the ward garage, where they thawed out and after a good breakfast upstairs at the hands of Mr. and Mrs. Lauren Hesley, their spirits were enlivened 100 per cent. The other group of three, however, stuck it out through the storm just to show that they were real outdoors men.

Contractor Albert North is giving employment to a number of his regular assistants by resuming work at Senator Charles Walton's place, after the winter's lay-off. After re-shingling a part of the house, new horse stables are now being built.

Since Orrin Ellsworth has resumed his work with Albert North, his place as clipping assistant with Judge Weidner is being filled by John Thompson. Report has it that the Judge has harvested over 100 gallons of maple syrup to date.

Although the snow was knee deep to a tall Indian in many places, all the pupils except two of the small children succeeded in braving the blustery north winds on the reopening of school on Tuesday morning. The program of the day went off real well, for the children were fortunate in having two teachers present. Miss Hazel Bell was unable to reach the Bushkill school, as the roads were not plowed open, when she arrived at Colange's store, so she walked up to the West Shokan school and spent the day there. Two of the former pupils, Miss Helen Thompson and Miss Rose Elia North also visited their old school on Tuesday. It seems like quite a change to come back to the little one room school house after attending Kingston High School and having each class in a different room and receiving instruction under different teachers. Both Helen and Rose are progressing rapidly in their studies. Perhaps an important factor in the laying of the foundation of their future success rests upon the careful instruction and guidance of their former teacher, Mrs. West. Among other successful students who have been graduated from the West Shokan school are John Jordan, Jr., who is now holding a responsible position at Cornell; Donald Bishop, a student at Hartwick College, and Mariam Davis, who will be graduated from Kingston High School this June.

From the looks of things around the busy poultry farm these days, Herman Weidner intends to do some extensive building again this year. Several loads of lumber have been delivered from Olive Bridge during the past week, which is now piled high in Weidner's back yard. All wonder what it will be this time.

Mildred, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Davis of Olive Bridge, underwent an operation for appendicitis on Monday morning at the Benedictine Hospital. Mildred had been complaining for the past month. At the present writing she is getting along nicely, under the care of Dr. Bush.

Johnnie Dolan is spending a dandy vacation at the Dolan residence at West Shokan Heights. The snow doesn't bother him a bit, in fact, he rather enjoys the deep snow banks and blustery north wind when he is bobbing up and down on the back of his cute little pony, Chubby.

Ira Burgher of Kingston called on his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Burgher, on Tuesday. Everyone is glad to hear that Mr. Burgher is much improved at the present time.

Donald Bishop was a business caller at Ashokan on Tuesday afternoon.

Orrin Ellsworth has been working for contractor Albert North for the past few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott, the genial cotenants with Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Bell at "Dickey Bell" cottage, spent their Easter holiday up in the Catskills. Mr. Scott, who is very fond of fishing, and all other outdoor recreation, is employed in Wall Street, New York city. Last autumn he rented part of Mr. Weidner's cottage and this summer he expects to be up here a good deal.

AVIATOR PREFERS HOME CRUSTS TO U. S. RICHES

Sydney (AP).—Kingford Smith, air commodore of Australia and one of the world's greatest airmen, is trying to earn an honest crust by taking people for flights over the city, at $3.00 a trip.

He uses the monoplane Southern Cross in which he flew from San Francisco to Sydney.

Smith says he can get a good job in the United States any time he chooses to go there.

"I was offered $100,000 for two year's service, but as it entailed being naturalized I refused," he explained.

Terms of Derision

The French words "sans culottes" were a term of derision frequently applied to the peasants or proletariat. Liberally translated it means without skirts, underclothes or breeches. During the revolution the aristocrats were frequently alluded to by the revolting peasants as "sans capote" meaning that they were frequently deprived of their heads.

Nila Cook Made "First American Aryan" By Initiation Into Mystic Hindu Sect

BY JAMES A. MILLS

Mount Abu, India (AP)—Nila Cram Cook, the 21-year-old American who recently became a convert to Hinduism, has been forced to postpone her plan to enter Gandhi's colony at Ahmedabad by the imprisonment of the Mahatma.

In the interim Miss Cook has become a disciple and pupil of the famous Hindu teacher, Jaina Yogi, Shree Shanti Vijaia Maharaja, at this retreat in the hills of romantic Rajputana.

Miss Cook has become known throughout India as the first "American Aryan." Her admission into the mysteries of the Brahmin community attracted even greater notice than the conversion a few years ago of Nancy Miller, of Seattle, who married the former Maharaja of Indore.

Ordinarily Hindu laws do not provide for the conversion of a foreigner, but Miss Cook was admitted into the Arya Samaj sect on the ground that, according to the priests, she had lived in India tens of thousands of years ago in another incarnation, and had only strayed temporarily from the spiritual realm.

While the priests were chanting Vedic hymns, Miss Cook was instructed to spend an hour in meditation. When, after the hour, she opened her eyes, the entire Brahmin community had assembled.

Women strewed her path with flowers and garlanded her body, and Miss Cook then was conducted into the inner sanctuary of the temple, where ancient Sanscrit prayers were recited and she was given marigold petals and sacred water to sprinkle upon herself.

This rite is peculiar to the Hindus, who teach that before worshipping the Almighty a devotee must first worship the god in himself. Atma, the higher, immortal self being considered the purest manifestation of God in the cosmos.

"May the return of our sister from Patala-Loka (America, the antipodes of ancient India) be a sign to us all of the brotherhood of nations and of the oneness of religious devotion," said the officiating priest as he led the American girl from the inner sanctuary.

Nila Cram Cook, daughter of the late George Cram Cook, the American poet, shown in her Hindu robes at Dailnaira, India, where she was initiated into the Brahmin sect, the highest caste of the Hindu religion.

Pandit Daulat Ram, leader of the Srinagar Brahmin community then announced that the Hindu name of Nila Nagini had been given Miss Cook as the first "American Aryan."

TB Committee Begins War on Tuberculosis

With the slogan "Tuberculosis Causes Tuberculosis—Every Case Comes From Another," the Ulster County Tuberculosis Association, in conjunction with 2,084 associations and committees from Maine to California, enters upon an intensive campaign for the early discovery of tuberculosis today.

"Our campaign will be conducted in cooperation with private physicians, social workers, health officers and public health nurses, as well as the general public," stated Judge Joseph Fowler, president.

"Tuberculosis flourishes in undernourished over-worked bodies. During these times of depression, seeds of this disease may be sown among young children which will burst into action perhaps 10 to 15 or 20 years hence when the strain of family responsibility or a rundown resistance allows the dormant germs to grow.

"Our campaign this year is interested in locating as many cases of childhood tuberculosis as possible and to institute proper treatment for them. However, this problem can never be solved in Ulster county until every tuberculosis carrier is located and isolated.

"Science has discovered that tuberculosis is not a hereditary disease, but it is one of the most dangerous of the communicable diseases. It is a household disease because germs are readily spread in the close contact of family life.

"The discovery of a case of tuberculosis is a signal to search out the source. It may be in a boarder in the home or a servant—cooks and maids are often sources of infection—often it has proven to be a grandparent suffering with a chronic ailment disguised as asthma, bronchitis or heart disease. It may be a relative who is a frequent visitor to the home."

The president and the county committee urge the cooperation of all physicians, health officers, social workers, public health nurses and the general public in the campaign for the early diagnosis of tuberculosis.

PET MARJORIE

"PET MARJORIE." Sir Walter Scott called her, little Marjorie Fleming who lived near him in Edinburgh. Her whimsical personality and unfulfilling literary career began when she was six and ended by her death just before she was nine, won her unusual friends in her day and a peculiar sort of fame ever since. A statue to Pet Marjorie was set up only last year in her birthplace, Kirkcaldy, Scotland, and she is mentioned in the Dictionary of National Biography as one whose "life is probably the shortest to be recorded in these volumes, yet one of the most charming characters."

Marjorie Fleming was born in 1803. When she was just turning six the family moved to Edinburgh and Marjorie took up writing and commenced her famous friendship with Scott. Part of the Waverly novels were written with Pet Marjorie on the author's knee. Sometimes she would amuse him by reciting long passages from Shakespeare; at others they would tramp together across the fields while Scott's dog Maida scampered joyously about them.

Marjorie has left us a number of letters recording her childish observations and philosophy, an epic in verse concerning Mary Queen of Scots, whose royalty she upheld even while she condemned her morals, and a journal written between the ages of seven and eight containing more observations on life and a number of poems, all of them recently republished for the modern reader. Pet Marjorie died of measles in 1811.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S TRAVELS

28 By James W. Brooks

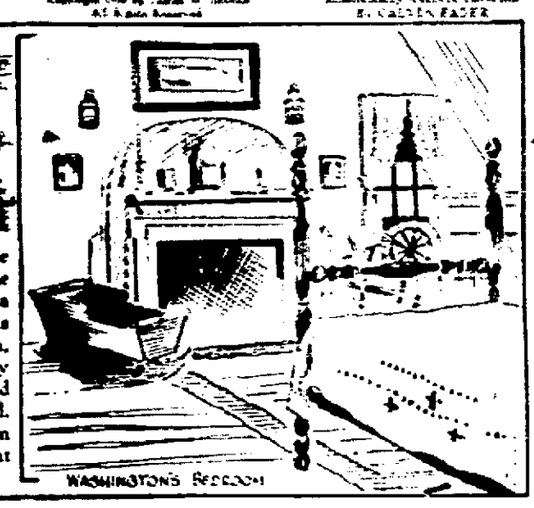

STRETCH OF KING'S HIGHWAY AT RIPPON LODGE.

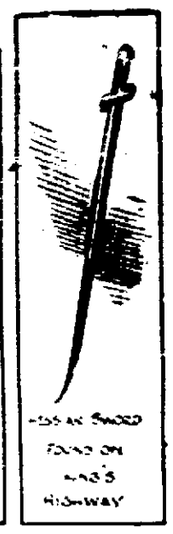

WHEN traveling between Mount Vernon, Fredericksburg and Williamsburg, Washington was a frequent guest at Rippon Lodge, a house built about 1725, later the home of Col. Thomas Blackburn, "friend and comrade in arms of Gen. Washington", reads the tablet placed at the entrance by the Mount Vernon Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Rippon Lodge, near Dumfries on U. S. 1, was also the family home of Mrs. Bushrod Washington (Ann Blackburn) and Mrs. John Augustine Washington (Jane Charlotte Blackburn) each in turn the mistress of Mount Vernon.

THE tea-bushes in the foreground have grown on the lawn at Rippon Lodge since Colonial days when England enacted a tax on tea. The non-importation resolutions drawn at Gunston Hall by George Mason, introduced in the House of Burgesses by George Washington, and favorably reported on by the Chairman of the Committee, Col. Thomas Blackburn, made the tea discussion a neighborhood affair. But how significant its bearing upon the country's future!

Kingston: "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." A remarkable talking picture, with Fredric March rising to great dramatic heights in the dual role of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. The talkie version of the famous book of Robert Louis Stevenson proves to be one of the most thoroughly entertaining as well as horrible plays that has been offered the movie public in some time. The story concerns a young doctor who discovers a potent chemical that will change a man into a monster. He partakes of the drug, and turns into a beast-like man. The transformation of the handsome, romantic Dr. Jekyll into the loathsome, brutal Mr. Hyde before the eyes of the audience contributes another spine chilling episode in a play filled with horrors and nerve racking moments. Mr. March does splendid work, and is ably supported by Miriam Hopkins and Rose Hobart.

Orpheum: "Tonight or Never" and "Law of the Rio Grande." Gloria Swanson plays the part of a talented opera singer in the first picture, and she finds that love and romance are essential to her success. Melvyn Douglas is also in the cast. "Law of the Rio Grande," with Bob Custer, is a border story with action and romance.

Broadway: "No One Man" and seven new acts of Paramount vaudeville on the Broadway stage. "No One Man" has a splendid cast of actors that includes Carole Lombard, Paul Lukas and Ricardo Cortez. The plot concerns a modern girl's ideas of love and romance, and although the action is slow, good acting and dialogue both contribute to the success of an otherwise slow moving show. Miss Lombard wears some beautiful gowns in this production, in fact the whole play is lavish in atmosphere and direction. The stage show continues with a new program of seven vaudeville acts.

Ritz: "Flying High." This show helps to prove that movie producers have learned how to make comedies both musical and funny at the same time. There is plenty of action every minute in this clever show, and there are numerous songs and dances thrown in. Bert Lahr and Charlotte Greenwood prove to be as good a comedy team as there is in the movies, and they scamper through a fast moving plot in laughable style. There are a number of unusual dances, and some interesting camera shots. Good entertainment.

Annie Russell, Back To Footlights, Hopes She'll Be Inspiration To Youth

Appearing as "The Queen" in the poetic drama, "In a Balcony," Annie Russell has returned to the stage after 14 years' retirement. The noted actress is shown at left as she appears today. At right she is shown before her retirement as she played the role of a Texas girl in "The Stronger Sex," and below as "Major Barbara" in the play by that name. Above is the Annie Russell Theatre at Winter Park, Fla., where she made her second "debut."

Eagle Caught in Power Lines Shuts Off Lights

Dodge City, Kan.—When power trouble resulted between here and Bucklin, and lights went out, investigators found a large eagle had fallen on the wires and shorted them. The bird measured six feet between wing tips and had a rabbit in its claws. It was a white headed eagle, rarely ever seen in this section of the country.

107, Attends Son's Funeral

Wadesboro, N. C.—When Alexander Melton, eighty-three, was buried in Chesterfield county, the funeral was attended by his father, Allen Melton, one hundred and seven. Allen Melton rode a mule eight or ten miles to see his son buried.

WORLD WAR

Battle Over U. S. Entry 15 Years Ago On April 6 Is Echoed By Present Congress Tax Dilemma

ECONOMIC ILLS

The fifteenth anniversary of the United States' entry into the World War finds congress struggling to balance the budget and overcome economic ailments which are largely attributed to the war. At left above is shown the 1917 congress as President Wilson read the declaration that a state of war existed. At right is the 1932 congress now in a battle over taxes.

Washington (AP)—At 11 minutes past 1 o'clock on the afternoon of April 6, exactly 17 years will have passed since the United States plunged into the World War.

The seventy-second Congress, now in the midst of a fight on economic adversity attributed in large measure to that war, probably will pay scant attention to the anniversary. For the termination, rather than the beginning, of "Europe's terrible holocaust," is the nation's great day of World War remembrance.

Preserved on yellow "dimsies" in the old files of The Associated Press reports is the story of those dramatic days in the spring of 1917 when the young republic moved swiftly to embark on the "great adventure of saving the world for democracy, maintaining the while its own honor."

Before a Congress solemnly assembled in special session went President Wilson on April 2 to ask for a declaration of the existence of a state of war between the United States and the Imperial German government.

"We have no quarrel with the German people," he said. And later in his speech: "It is a fearful thing to lead this great peaceful people into the most terrible and disastrous of all wars. But the right is more precious than peace and we shall fight for the things we have always carried nearest our hearts."

At 11:13 on the night of April 4 the Senate by a vote of 82 to 6 adopted the war resolution. The house approved it by a vote of 373 to 50 a few minutes after 3 o'clock on the morning of April 6 and President Wilson affixed his signature at 1:11 that afternoon.

The Senate vote came at the conclusion of 12 hours of continuous debate before a huge gallery completely hushed by the solemnity of the occasion. The debate was opened by Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, leading the support of President Wilson's decision that the nation must fight to protect its honor and democracy throughout the world.

"We of all nations," he said, "will spend our treasure and our blood without the thought of a possibilty of gain."

The sentiment of many of his colleagues was expressed by Senator Swanson of Virginia, who, in referring to Germany's unrestricted submarine campaign, said: "The issue is not peace or war. War has already been declared upon us."

Leading the little band of six who opposed the resolution was the late Robert M. LaFollette, Sr. He launched into an impassioned three-hour speech by reading a letter from a North Dakota woman protesting in behalf of her son against the slaughter of war.

Predicting that the people would be taxed double again and again, the Wisconsin insurgent shouted: "The poor who are called to rot in the trenches have now no organized mouthpiece; they have no press, but the day is coming when they will be heard."

And later with dramatic intensity he cried: "The man who says I am unpatriotic lies in his throat."

Said Senator Norris of Nebraska: "I am most emphatically opposed to taking any step that will force this country into useless and senseless war. But I shall not permit my feelings to interfere with bringing victory to American arms.

"We are going into war upon command of gold," he continued. "We are about to do the bidding of wealth's terrible mandate, make millions of our countrymen suffer, untold generations bear burdens and shed their life blood all because we want to preserve our commercial right to deliver munitions to the belligerents."

Of the six senators—characterized by President Wilson as that "little group of willful men" who voted against the resolution—only Norris is still living. The others were La Follette, William J. Stone of Missouri, James Vardaman of Mississippi, Asle J. Gronna of North Dakota and Harry Lane of Oregon.

In the House there still are several members who voted against war, among them Fred Britten of Illinois, now ranking Republican member of the Naval Affairs Committee, and Royal C. Johnson, of South Dakota, who relinquished his seat to enlist as a private.

Senator Dill of Washington was then a member of the House who opposed the war resolution.

Industrial Dinner An Important Event

It is stated that the industrial dinner to be held at the Governor Clinton Hotel Thursday evening, April 7, will be one of the most important events, as far as the business and industrial interests of Kingston are concerned, that has taken place in a long time.

Thesdinner is being sponsored by the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs and the Chamber of Commerce and tickets may be procured of the club members or at the Chamber of Commerce office. The dinner will be held at 6:30.

The speaker for the occasion will be Tampton Aubuchon, who is said to be one of the greatest industrial development engineers in the country. Mr. Aubuchon is heralded as the "man with a definite, concrete, workable plan," one that has been adopted and proven successful by other cities.

It is emphasized that Mr. Aubuchon's plan is not "automatic." It does not work itself, but demands the backing and cooperation of the business men and merchants of the city if it is to be a success.

All those interested in the industrial development and the busfness interests of the city are asked to attend the dinner at the Governor Clinton next Thursday evening and hear what Mr. Aubuchon has to offer as a remedy for the drifting away of industries and means to be adopted for the securing of new industries.

every day that an Electric Refrigerator is in your Home

THE story of an Electric Refrigerator is a story of thrift in food savings. Summer and winter, spring and fall—24 hours a day—it is busy preventing spoilage and waste—keeping your perishables crisp and fresh—making delicious, inexpensive salads—declaring daily dividends upon your investment.

For a moment let's forget all the glorious fun there is in owning an electric refrigerator. Forget, if you can, all the marvelous frosty salads, frozen puddings, chilly bouillons, icy drinks it helps to make. And forget its convenience, and the protection it offers by keeping food and milk so fresh and wholesome. Let's just look at an electric refrigerator from a strictly business standpoint—size it up purely as a wise investment.

Count up the vegetables, the fruit, the meat, the butter that adequate refrigeration keeps from being wasted. That is thrift! Count up the many intriguing delicacies you can make from little bits of this and that left over from yesterday's dinner. The lettuce, celery—all the leafy green things that it keeps from wilting. That is thrift! Count up the scores of inexpensive frozen desserts that you can make—the bottles of milk and cream that it keeps from souring. That is thrift!

Forty States and District of Columbia Voting Over 3 to 2 Wet

Drys Show Sixth Consecutive Gain Throughout Nation

The only state that has had a dry majority, Kansas, comes within a fractional percentage of voting wet in the seventh weekly tabulation of The Literary Digest's Prohibition Poll as over 500,000 additional ballots are added to the nation wide tally, published in tomorrow's issue of the magazine.

The dry percentage of the Kansas vote has been reduced from 53.34 last week to 50.07 this week.

Throughout the country as a whole the dry vote shows a sixth consecutive gain, rising from 15.85 per cent of the total vote of the first week's returns to 25.10 per cent last week and 25.75 per cent of the current tabulation.

Forty of the forty-eight states are voting three to two wet in the present report. Of these states nine are voting more than three to one for repeal and nine more states are voting over four to one wet.

North Carolina continues to show a rising dry vote and is within one-tenth of one per cent of a majority for prohibition with 49.92 per cent of its total balloting so far in favor of the Eighteenth Amendment.

The East South Central States of Kentucky, Alabama, Tennessee, and Mississippi form the dryest sectional group in the United States, although voting wet, with a percentage of their combined totals of 59.62 for repeal.

The geographic unit with the largest vote for repeal is the Middle Atlantic States of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania where the wet balloting is 80.88 per cent of the combined total.

A total of 3,715,630 votes are tallied this week from all states and the District of Columbia of which 956,863, or 25.75 per cent, are for continuance of the Prohibition Amendment and 2,758,767, or 74.25 per cent, are for repeal.

The New England States as a group are voting 78.76 per cent wet; the East North Central States are 75.66 per cent for repeal; the South Atlantic States are 65 per cent wet; the West North Central group are 66.58 per cent for repeal; the West South Central are 60.72 per cent wet; the Rocky Mountain States are 66.97 per cent for repeal; and the three Pacific States are 75.23 per cent wet.

The commonwealths with over 40 per cent sentiment in favor of the Eighteenth Amendment include Kansas, North Carolina, Tennessee, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Alabama, Colorado and Mississippi, named in order of the higher dry ratio.

The District of Columbia is voting 21.84 per cent dry and 78.16 per cent for repeal of the Prohibition Amendment, a slight recession in the dry vote from last week.

Nevada continues to head the Anti-Prohibition column with 86.60 per cent of its total ballots in favor of repeal.

"Just at the height of the excitement," The Literary Digest will state in its issue tomorrow, "Kansas, the solitary Sahara of The Digest poll takes a sudden sharp slump in the tally and seems almost in peril of going over the wet top.

"Her tobaggon ride in the seventh report of the twenty-million straw vote is short but steep. It almost lands her on the dry-wet fence.

"She ducks that scandal, for the time being, by a scanty margin of seven hundredths of one per cent.

"Meanwhile, our anxious dry friends will scan the remainder of the seventh report in search of compensation for the calamity threatened in Kansas.

"Certain morsels of compensation may be found here and there. For instance, North Carolina's dry percentage has crept up to 49.91 and she seems just as likely to go over the dry top as Kansas is to go over the wet top.

"Again the drys have made another gain over the whole country in their percentage status. Last week the poll was 25.10 per cent dry; this week it is 25.75 per cent dry.

"In the seventh report we have arranged the states under their geographical classifications. Of the nine sections of the country the dryest is the 'East South Central' embracing Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, and Mississippi.

"In the ructions along the prohibition front some trench bombs and a good deal of poison gas are being launched at The Digest regardless of our non-combatant status and the fact that we are busy obtaining light for both sides to see by.

"In the near future The Literary Digest is going to produce some facts and figures that will stop all that loose talk as far as sensible people are concerned.

"In the meantime, you must look at it as a whole, not concentrating on the rough spots. Twenty million ballots! Some are undelivered, some overlap, some do not turn up where they are fondly expected and fiercely desired. Drys complaining. Wets complaining. Women complaining—some of them dry and some of them wet.

"But the thing as a whole—it works, it gives results. Well-informed people, both wet and dry, respect its soundness. They know that in a big way, in spite of its rough spots, it finds out the truth."

The seventh report in the 1930 Literary Digest Prohibition Poll giving three options on the ballot instead of two, showed a total tabulation of 3,705,742 votes of which 1,092,745, about 29½ per cent, were for enforcement; 1,105,683 votes, or approximately 30 per cent, for modification; 1,507,314, or about 40½ per cent of the total, were for repeal.

In The Literary Digest's Prohibition Poll in 1922, the seventh week's tabulation showed a total of 787,475 ballots returned of which 302,515, nearly 38½ per cent, were for strict enforcement; 322,328, nearly 41 per cent, were for modification and 162,632 or approximately 20½ per cent were for repeal.

OFFICE CAT

By Junius

April fool comes but once a year, the other kind come every day.

Radio Advertising: The selling talk that comes in while you are dialing for another station.

Diner (sniffing suspiciously) — Waiter, forget about that order of mine. I don't eat where it smells of paint.

Waiter — If you'll just wait a moment those two young ladies will be gone.

Among other things that are not what they used to be is all fools' day.

About the only boosters for these cold, rainy spring days are the college professors. They aver that cold, wet days delay the outbreak of spring fever which afflicts college students at this time of year bringing restlessness in class work and neglect of study.

April

Fickle we've been told you are;
Rainy oft and cold you are;
Sunshine alternating with a shower
now and then.
Tears and instant laughter
Coming bubbling after
These were always April, and perhaps will be again.

Yet why rave about it?
Why get up and shout it?
If we don't approve of it pray what are we to do?
Go on being crazy;
Freeze the newborn daisy?
I pay no attention to a trifler such as you!

Long before my coming
April's bees were humming
(Further south in latitude, of course, but this must rhyme!)
After I've quit living,
Loving and forgiving,
You will keep arriving at—or mighty
near—your time

So, from this we gather
(Will we tho? Well, rather!)
April as a fickle month has wasted ink enough.
Scribes long since forgotten
Spoiled you—spoiled you rotten.
All I have to say to you is: "April do your stuff."

Graduates from local schools will receive a lot of advice in the next few weeks, some of it fundamental and more of it modern. It may not be necessary to add a line, but this is ventured: The Bible is more reliable as a guide to living than the bootlegger.

Model (to artist who is painting his picture)—Could you put a cigar in my mouth?

Artist—Yes, but it would cost you ten cents extra.

Tiflie the Stenog—Aren't there any bright lights at all in the life of a bookkeeper?

Grumpy Bookkeeper—Yes, on the seat of his trousers.

This is the season of the year when the housewife thinks things would look better if the bed was where the dresser now is.

Suspected of being mentally deficient, a schoolboy was taken to an Institute of Human Relations for examination by psychologists.

Bespectacled Scientist—How many ears has a cat?

The Lad (instantly)—Two.

Bespectacled Scientist—And how many eyes has a cat?

The Lad—Two.

Bespectacled Scientist—And how many legs has a cat?

The Lad (looking at him suspiciously)—Say, didn't you ever see a cat?

We can't all think alike. Differences of opinion are what make church denominations, political parties and horse races.

Teacher—Willie, I think I'll keep you after school.

Willie—It won't do you any good. I'm a woman hater.

A girl's account often goes in the red to keep her in the pink.

WILL CONTEST HOLDS BACK MONEY FOR CHINESE WAR

Bolzano, Italy (AP).—Half a million dollars willed to the Chinese government "for use in fighting the Europeans" is tied up by court proceedings in Germany.

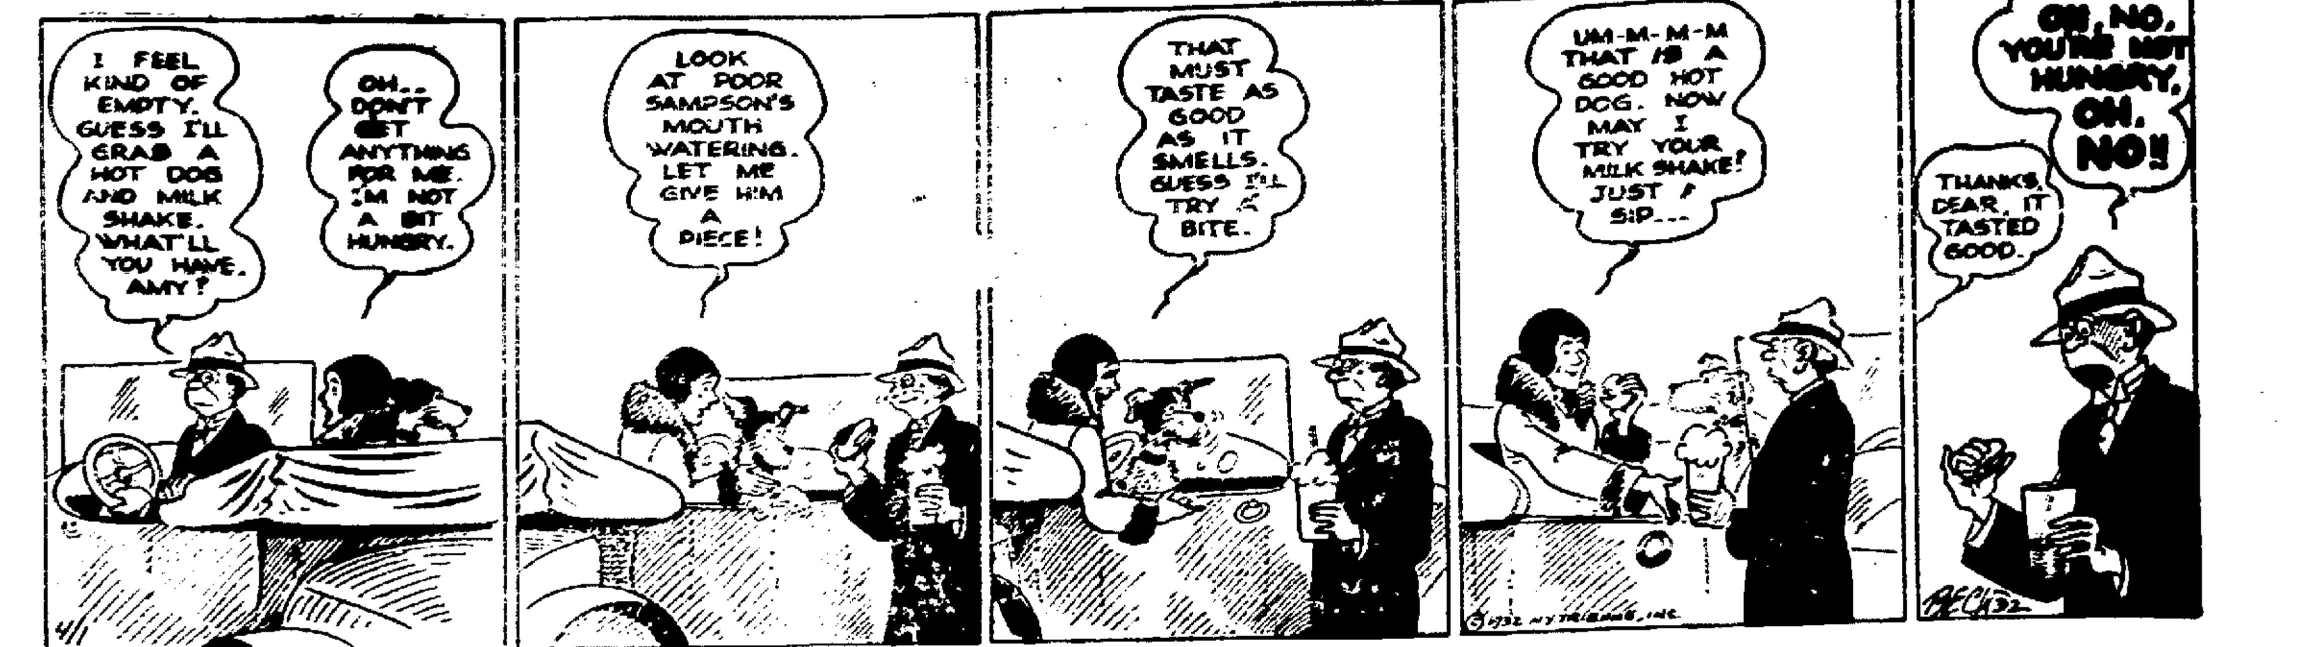

The money was left by Henry Basse, eccentric German who died here at 81 in apparent poverty.

Relatives contested the will on the ground that there are two Chinese governments and that neither could accept such a donation.

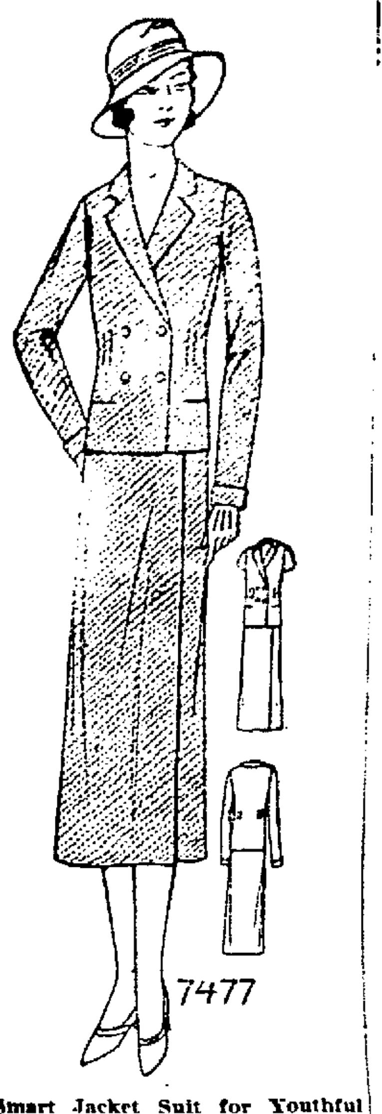

"I'd like to fool the Tiger and I'd like to fool the Sloth
(I'd love to put some ginger in that snooty Cheetah's broth!)—
I'd like to fool the Antelope—Giraffe, Hyena, too—
The trouble is, when you fool them, then they can all fool you."

No Foolin' About the Appeal of Men's Wear Suitings

New York—Men's-wear materials have caught the eyes of the couturiers and are being used for many of the most stunning street and spectator-sports clothes just now. For the latter types there are flannels, especially gray; but for suits, coat dresses and jacket costumes, such suitings as are used by men's tailors are coveted by the well-dressed woman. Do you remember the skepticism with which wool for dresses was first received and the opinions expressed, by those who should have known better, that women would not wear wool dresses? How foolish such prophets must feel, now that nothing short of torrid temperature can get women out of wool!

It looks as though we would leap this summer from wool to cotton—or linen. We seem to be facing a wash season, but until such time as we can don wash fabrics, we are casting covetous eyes on men's suitings. For the coat dress has returned—the type one slips into coat fashion instead of putting on over one's head.

The model sketched shows what Patou can do by way of feminizing a pin-striped suiting and a white, double-breasted pique vest. The bolero with revers is a spring-time fancy. Jackets as brief as possible seem to be the usual prescription, and nothing briefer than a bolero is possible.

While smooth worsteds have their sponsors, the rank and file of women seem to feel more at home in the softer types of materials—hopsackings, basket weaves, homespuns and wool crepes being the leaders.

Materially speaking, we seem to feel like roughing it this season. There are ever so many rough-surfaced silks to the fore. We are promised a deluge of seersucker, which is rough enough for most. If you are undecided about going completely masculine in your choice of a suit, compromise by making up one of the mannish models in crepy woolen. One is also permitted big bows at the neck and jabots and all manner of accessories that seem distinctly out of the masculine category.

PATOU PRESENTS A PIN STRIPE

Copyright, 1932, by Fairchild

The bolero, attached at back, or loose, over contrasting guimpe or gilet, makes one of the outstanding street types this spring. Patou has smartly interpreted this style in a black worsted pin-striped in white. The gilet is white pique, the wide belt being scarlet patent leather.

Capelet or Jacket—a Part of the Costume

New York—The immediate impression, on reviewing dress collections, is that every dress is a costume in itself, since nearly every one is accompanied by some kind of little jacket or capelet made of self material.

In formal costumes the little jacket or capelet is handled so that it often seems to be part of the dress itself, and suggests that the gown may be converted at will to a cocktail or evening dress. A diagonal surplice closing, with the jacket fitted close to the waistline, is favored for both formal and daytime wear. This is true of little capelets also, most of which are cut in full bias fashion and ripple over the shoulder and back. Often they are secured at the waistline, or little capelets may be used over the shoulders in places of sleeves.

Tailored Terry Cloth and Flannel

(Copyright, 1932, by Fairchild)

Left—A terry pajama in burnt orange adopts striped terry bolero and sash as well as applique bodice trim of the patterned medium.

Right—Zig-zag appliqued edging in a contrasting tone highlights a tailored flannel negligee. Melon and Lido blue is the color alliance advanced in this instance.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Horizontal folds and drapes or released tucks widen the new sleeves at shoulder.

The dropped-shoulder coat, without sleeves, or with elbow capesleeves, is good.

Pink and blue prints to wear with navy coats and jackets, or in evening fashions, are to be noted.

Schiaparelli's brown in daytime fashions, and some evening, is a departure from navy.

DOUBLE DUTY FROCK FINDS WIDE FAVOR

The time seems to be over, for the present at any rate, when we had a different costume for each occasion. Now, our frocks have to do double duty and be just as good looking at tea as at a smart restaurant or night club.

For this reason we now dress ourselves, slipping on over a decollete gown a bloused effect, jacket or bolero to make it perfectly presentable when the bright lights are not yet gilding the blue of night. This is an extremely practical and workable fashion and no matter how much the great houses may charge for such a model, the purchaser feels virtuously happy that she is effecting an important economy by buying a two-in-one frock.

Ensembles of Shoes and Bag Add Chic to Suit

It seems to be that although the shoes and the handbag are of necessity so far apart from each other, they are really soul-mates. But at last this fact is receiving proper recognition, for nearly every smart shop here now shows ensembles of shoe and bag and rare it is nowadays to find a shop without several examples of this smart combination.

For smart it is, guaranteed to dress the simplest spring coat or suit and give it new charm and chic. More and more, we are co-relating our accessories and doing away with slipshod methods of selecting things that are totally unrelated and have no reason for being worn together.

Lacquered Hair New for Evening Coiffures

Lacquered hair is a new note in coiffures for feminine heads. The hair is treated with a lacquer which does not change its color, but which makes each hair almost twice its normal size.

It is then arranged in ringlets and swirls and allowed to dry. The lacquer, which is used only in the evening, may be easily washed off next morning.

Study Your Job

A new job is like a new acquaintance. A little strange at the start, a little slow to reveal its best points. But jobs are much like friendships. They are worth studying, worth cultivating, worth probing every one of the infinite possibilities of each.—Grit.

Scared Them to Death

Some of our local sportsmen may have had a similar experience with the high cost of duck shooting as a Winnipeg man's report of one day on the marshes. This almost fired seventy-five shells, costing $2.75. His gasoline for the trip cost $2.25 and his hunter's license $2. His bag was three ducks, or $2.33 per duck. As there was no evidence of pellets in the birds it is believed they died of heart failure caused by the barrage.—Vancouver Province.

War on Weeds

Weeds are the railwayman's enemy as well as the gardener's. If left alone they would choke the permanent way as effectively as in like circumstances they would do our flower beds and gravel paths. The British Southern railway made an effective weed killing train by coupling two old tenders together and fitting them with spray pipes and tanks. A special form of liquid weed-killer is used, and the spray pipes have an effective range of about ten feet.

Gold in Quantity Dug From Hills of Wicklow

Bracelets and necklets of pure gold, and 1,500 years old, which came from Ireland, have been discovered on a farm at Towednack, St. Ives, Cornwall. Such finds are treasure-trove and become the property of the crown, but the finders will receive practically the full value of the gold after it has been examined by experts. The gold was obtained from the Wicklow hills. Gold has been obtained from the same source in large quantities until comparatively modern times. In September, 1795, the Wicklow nugget was found. It weighed 22 ounces, and was made into a snuff box for George III. One of the richest finds of Irish gold was the great Clare find of 1854. Four laborers were working on a new cutting for the Limerick & Ennis railway when one of them turned over a pile of gold. One man was so excited that he dropped his spade, filled his hat with gold and dashed off to Newmarket—the nearest town—and sold his find for $150. This hatful was worth $2,000.

$20,000 Verdict in Supreme Court

Marven H. Hornbeck of Hasbrouck avenue was awarded a verdict in the sum of $20,000 in his $50,000 action against the National Lead Company late Thursday afternoon when the jury reported to Judge Staley in Supreme Court.

Mr. Hornbeck, a painter and paperhanger by trade, suffered a broken neck on February 13, 1930, when his Ford truck and a Buick car operated by a salesman of the defendant company collided near the Decker home at Lake Katrine on the main Kingston-Albany highway.

Mr. Hornbeck claimed that he was driving north on the highway en route to the Decker home, they being related. When he had reached a point near the Decker place he observed a car coming south. It was described as being over 400 feet away at the time when Mr. Hornbeck swung across the highway to the left and was about to enter the driveway. He claimed that the Buick continued on and struck him but that at the time his Ford car was in the drive and the contact came when his car was completely off the road. He testified that he had expended some $840 for medical care, etc. He testified that he noticed the Buick car approach for some time before he turned, believing he had ample time to cross the road. It was late in the afternoon and the parking lights of the Buick were on.

The driver of the defendant's car contended that he was proceeding south along the road with his car on the right. That he too observed the Hornbeck car coming north and that as he approached the point of the accident he observed the Ford swerve slightly to the left toward the center of the road. No signal was given by the driver. When his car was about 20 feet from the drive entrance he alleges Mr. Hornbeck turned his car directly across the road and in the path of the Buick and that at the time of the contact his Buick had been brought nearly to a stop. He charged the driver of the Ford negligently and without proper signals crossed the road in his path when he had no time to stop or avoid an accident.

Harry H. Flemming appeared for the plaintiff and Brinnier and Elsworth appeared for defendant.

In his charge to the jury Judge Staley presented the law governing the conditions and stated that if the jurors believed the story of plaintiff he should be awarded a very substantial amount to compensate him for the severe injuries he had sustained in view of the testimony in the case that the injuries might be permanent and prevent plaintiff from continuing any active occupation. However, he charged that the stories of the two differed very materially and it was for the jury to determine where the truth was. He charged that if the jury found the defendant right in his contention then the verdict must be one of no cause of action.

Paris automobile thieves were busy in 1931, taking 2,394 cars.

Flashes of Life Sketched In Brief

By The Associated Press.

Budapest—No tyros need apply. Antony Kozarek, hangman, caught cold on the scaffold and died, so the government is advertising for his successor. But he must have "sufficient previous experience."

Lincoln—"Dere's jes' two things I don't like," chattered Gordon Morgan, negro sea cook. "Both of them is cold." He made his remark after being trapped two hours in a freight-car ice box. He nearly froze to death.

New York—Guns, guns everywhere and not a shot to shoot. John F. Powers, Jr., who had them galore in his room, was arrested. But a ballistic expert ruled they were decorative and harmless, and Powers was cleared.

New York—Daniel Mulleavy got mad when burglars stole his $1,000 jewels, and madder when they offered to sell them to him on the installment plan. So he told the police sallied forth with marked bills, and trapped the man who delivered the goods.

Lincoln, Neb.—One hundred jobs with only 38 takers! Lincoln is having difficulty persuading its unemployed to accept jobs on the city streets.

Kansas City—Radio fans can now hear the scoffer at red lights get soaked. A municipal court is on the air daily. The judge hopes it will cut down traffic errors.

New York—A fledgling songbird seeks to follow his father's footsteps. Enrico Caruso, 28, is here to study music. "Ah, yes," he says, "I should like some day to sing at the Metropolitan, where my father sang."

New York—The theatrical training of a guinea pig and two doves was rudely interrupted. Prof. Louis Krieger, magician, said his landlord copped them after he had trained them for vaudeville. The landlord suggested payment of $90 rent. A judge suggested arbitration.

Churchton, Tenn.—The Rev. F. A. Neely, pastor of Mount Carmel Methodist Church, is hopeful that a certain person will derive some benefit from reading a Bible. The person referred to stole the Bible belonging to the church.

Chicago—Maurice Lippert offered his wife a whole trunk full of money and bonds, but she wasn't to be fooled.

"I want my $160 alimony and that's all I want," she told the judge. "Let him keep his trunk. I've looked through it. The money in it is Russian rubles, pre-war, and the bonds are German, also pre-war."

The judge gave Lippert until Monday to raise some American money or go to jail and be welcomed as the 90th member of Chicago's present "alimony club."

Hummingbird's Nest

The nest of a ruby-throated hummingbird is about the size of a silver dollar in diameter and its eggs, two in number, are the size of full-grown peas. A total of nearly 500 species of hummingbirds have been identified and 16 of these are to be found in the United States.

Musical Note

Concerning the difference between a xylophone and a marimba, Harry Forbes writes as follows: "The marimba is built in a similar way to the xylophone, except that the compass is considerably lower. While having a very beautiful, mellow tone, the marimba is used only with soft beaters and for slow or sustained numbers. It is not suitable for the same class of work as the xylophone. There is an instrument now on the market which can be used for both soft-hammer and hard-hammer playing, known as the marimba-xylophone, having part of the marimba compass and also the range of the xylophone notes."—Washington Star.

John Smith the World Over

The good old American name of John Smith goes through some curious transformations when it is used in other languages, relates the Albany Ledger: For instance, John Smith in Latin becomes Johannes Smithus; in Italian he is known as Giovanni Smithi; in French he becomes Jean Smeet; the Russians call him Jonloff Smittonski; the Poles know him as Ivan Sschittweiski; the Welsh as Jihon Schmidd; the Hollanders as Hans Schmidt; the Greeks as Ion Smikton and the Spaniards as Juan Smithus, while in Turkey he is disguised as Yoe Seef.

Should a child be heard to whisper during services, or commit any other similar misdemeanor, that child is hailed to "court" and tried by his playmates. QUEER FOODS

Cooking Locusts in the Philippines.

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)—WNU Service.

FROG legs, once almost an exclusive tidbit of Gallic peoples, are adorning many American dinner tables. Sixty million frog legs are consumed in New York city annually. Chicago also proves that frog-leg eating is becoming "Americanese," for more than thirty-six million were eaten in that city last year. San Francisco palates were "tickled" by more than sixteen million frog legs; New Orleans ate slightly more, and Los Angeles slightly less.

In fact, frog logs have become so popular that a new industry—frog ranching—has come into American industrial life. California has no native frogs but ranchers have seen to it that many pairs have been imported from Louisiana to habilitate synthetic frog lakes and marshes.

The frog's entry on American menus recalls many strange foods of the world. In the markets of the United States where frog legs may be purchased, the housewife may buy a fresh "marsh rabbit" which, before trapping and skinning, was none other than a muskrat.

For two centuries a town in Massachusetts has supported a seaweed (Irish moss) industry. Irish moss is torn from New England rocks and is used in making blancmange and many other puddings. There are some 200 edible seaweeds from which are extracted ingredients for American ice creams, jellies, pastries, cereal foods and salads, while in Japan the weeds are boiled with rice and strips of meat and placed in a popular sandwich called sushi. The Japanese cultivate seaweed and in Tokyo bay the "farmers" employ more than 3,000 people.

Raw monkey brains on the half skull, pigskins and bird's nest soup and pickled water beetles are eaten in China. Silkworms are eaten after the cocoon has been unwound. Horses, donkeys and camels, after they have lost their usefulness as beasts of burden, are consumed by some Asiatic tribes. Caterpillars, frogs and snails are relished when obtainable.

Water lily bulbs make delectable oriental desserts. The bulbs are often called water chestnuts. Their nutritive value is compared with that of tapioca.

Old Eggs Liked in China.

Chinese enjoy eggs whose owners have long forgotten their age. The orientals claim they lend a somewhat oysterlike taste to oriental soups. Jellyfish also are relished along the Asiatic seaboard.

At Japanese inns the traveler is told that "Bombay duck" can be had at a reasonable price. The hungry customer visions a fat fowl but the waiter brings in pieces of smoked fish about two inches long and as thin as a dime. The menu also includes pickled seaweed, seaweed jelly, and chutney, which resembles pickled citron, but is almost as hot as Mexican chile.

More raw than cooked fish is eaten by Japanese. Raw baby octopuses are particularly popular. "Japanese Limburger" is not a cheese but a Japanese pickled diakon, or long white radish.

Koreans, like many orientals live mostly on rice. They cook their seaweed in oil and serve it with slices of red peppers. Kimshee, a kind of sauerkraut, is a favorite Korean dish.

To the north, the natives of Kamchatka relish the tongues and the narrow of the bones of reindeer, but the piece-de-resistance is the meat of unborn fawns. From the stomach of the reindeer the natives obtain their greens—half digested balls of moss. A popular native dish is reindeer sausage which has been surrounded by dough and dropped into boiling water. On the lower end of the peninsula where salmon are plentiful, dishes of boiled fish eyes are considered a delicacy. Some inhabitants of Asia Minor prefer sheep eyes.

New Guinea natives find China a good market for sharks' fins from which the Celestials make a delectable soup, and also for beche de mer, a large sea slug found in south Pacific waters.

Eel Is a Popular Dish.

The New Guinea natives are fond of the pith of sago palms, potatoes and bananas; and dog, snake and lizard flesh vie with that of the pig. The womenfolk gather beetles, grubs and larvae from trees to grace the festive board.

Eel meals are as popular among Japanese as are Maryland chicken dinners in Baltimore. In some Japanese cities, eel houses are nearly as numerous as weiner stands at a county fair. When the diner enters an eel house he is led to a large tub of live eels. He makes his choice of the wriggling creatures, it is speared, split along the back, cut into small pieces, and with soy sauce, is cooked over a charcoal fire.

Perhaps few people live as close to nature as the pygmies of the Belgian Congo. Tender roots are staples, but birds, small game, rodents or caterpillars are not objectionable.

In addition to many viands on the pygmy bill of fare, the Madagascar natives eat a species of spider, silkworms, grasshoppers, and dried locusts. When a "cloud" of locusts settles on a crop, a sufficient number of them are collected to offset the loss of food which the insects consume.

Every good native Madagascan housewife has in reserve a supply of dried locusts to sustain the family in times of famine. Grasshopper soup is a Hottentot dish of merit. Arabs make a flour of the dried insects.

Yak cheese is a staple in the Muli kingdom of western China and would not be objectionable to the western traveler if it were not for the numerous yak hairs in the substance.

On the table of the Corsican, a traveler might see half of the head of a lamb with tongue, cheek and brain in place. About the time the American appetite is whetted for Thanksgiving turkey, Corsican fishermen are catching eels for home consumption and for shipment to Nice and Naples where they are a delicacy.

A diner in a restaurant in Spreewald, Germany, whose order does not include eels will draw a curious glance from native patrons. There, eels, cucumbers and cherry pie, are "national dishes."

Truffles of France.

The varied bill of fare of the Frenchman includes foie gras—a paste of fatty goose livers. Truffles are rare delicacies. French farmers are frequently seen leading their pig and dog "truffle sniffers" over the fields. Truffles are small, round, blackish-gray fungi which usually are found about six inches below the surface of the earth. When the "sniffer" locates a truffle, he tries to uproot it. When near the choice morsel his master strikes him sharply on the nose with a stick and completes the digging. Later the animal is rewarded by the rough trimmings of the truffle with a view to keeping his truffle scent keen.

Basques about Bilboa, Spain, relish white, transparent worms about two inches long. They are fried in oil and are served hot.

One unusual meat is served not far from the American border. The Indians of Mexico prefer Iguana flesh to chicken. The appearance in the markets of the green lizardlike body, bedecked with a crest of spines running down to a long alligator-like tail, dulls the appetite of the hungry alien shopper.

Crocodile meat is good food in Africa and southern negroes enjoy the tails of the reptiles. Meat of sharks from temperate and tropical waters has a good market in Africa and also on the Malay peninsula while the great Arctic shark is a native food of Greenland.

Europe takes its snail industry seriously. Snail harvesting begins in June of each year when whole families desert their homes to beat the bushes in the alps near the Franco-Swiss frontier. Like oysters, snails should be eaten only in the "R" months of the year, so many of the collected snails are taken to "snail farms" and fed up on vegetables and many varieties of green leaves for marketing.

Paris is one of the world's leading snail consuming cities. Sixty to eighty million snails are handled in the French capital during a single winter.

There are peoples who literally eat dirt. In the Sudan, portions of South America and in the West Indies, many tribes eat certain kinds of clay they find on the river banks. They believe it is a remedy for anemia and for many other maladies.

In Camera

The phrase, tried in camera, means that the case was tried privately, not in open court. The meaning is derived from the Italian or Spanish word camera, a room or more especially a legislative chamber. Camera is also the name of a department of the Papal curia.

Short-Lived Federation

In 1823 the five Central American states were united into a national federation which subsequently adopted a constitution modeled after that of the United States. The federation was partially ended by 1833, practically dissolved in 1839, and completely dissolved by 1847.

Kiwanis Club Heard About Tree Program

A constructive program for the care and future of trees in the city was presented to the Kiwanis Club at the Governor Clinton Hotel Thursday noon by Richard H. D. Boerker, formerly connected with the U. S. Department of Forestry in California, and now a teacher at Kingston High School.

In the absence of the Rev. O. E. Brandorff, Howard R. St. John presided at the meeting. Paul Zucca called upon Max Reben to act as guest song leader following the luncheon, after which a letter was read from Henry S. Jennings, who is staying at 1100 Ninth street, South, St. Petersburg, Florida. Attention of club members was directed to the Industrial Dinner, sponsored by the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs, and the Chamber of Commerce on next Thursday evening at the Governor Clinton Hotel.

Robert Serrice of the program committee was called upon to introduce the speaker.

The speaker opened his remarks by saying that he was not going to criticize the tree cutting campaign in Kingston, because he did not have sufficient information to form an opinion. He believed people were getting very much worked up over the tree cutting, where in many cases it was necessary or at least advisable to remove certain trees. "Rather than use our energy to criticize the cutting of our trees, let us use this energy to promote some kind of a constructive program that will insure the future of the trees. I publicly suggest to the mayor that a competent person who understands trees and how to care for and plant them be hired by the city for the purpose of supervising all work pertaining to the trees in the city, with the object in view of intelligently caring for and planing the future for the city's tree life," stated the speaker.

Mr. Boerker then explained that trees were living organisms that required expert care, the same as human life; and that the people of the state support schools of forestry where competent men are trained in tree-lore. His suggestion was that one of these men be hired by the city to act as a tree warden.

"One of the greatest assets to the city is its beautiful trees which make this Colonial city one of the most beautiful in the state," he continued, "and with this asset we should endeavor to care for the trees so that their future may be assured."

Mr. Boerker then spoke of the value of trees, their beauty, shade and ability to purify the air. He stated that courts were more and more recognizing the money value of trees, that in cases where trees had been destroyed adequate damages had been paid.

The speaker thought that the city should have charge of the trees, because a large amount of them are on city property, and the care and planting could be uniform if it were under the direction of some chosen person. He called attention to desirable tree laws in Massachusetts, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, also saying that a number of cities had protective laws, including White Plains and Yonkers.

Where there is a tree warden, he explained that this gentleman's work consisted of choosing trees for the particular situation taking into consideration the space available, the trees already there, the size and kind of tree desired and for what purpose the tree was wanted. He also explained that some types of trees were a nuisance and that a number of trees existed in the city and would eventually have to come down.

In closing he called upon the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs and the Federation of Women's Clubs to use their influence to promote the care and proper treatment of the city's trees by selecting a trained man to supervise the city's tree life.

The following guests were present at the meeting: T. F. Walker, Jr., Utica; H. M. Cameron of Ulster Park; A. V. Bonesteel and John Conlin, both of Kingston. The meeting closed with a song led by Mr. Zucca, accompanied at the piano by Danny Pittner.

Evaded Effort

It's pretty hard to get ahead of the youngsters. A teacher called for brief essays on "The funniest thing I ever saw." One boy got through several minutes before the others and the teacher asked to see his effort. On his paper was written: "The funniest thing I ever saw was too funny for words."—Boston Transcript.

GIRL SCOUT BETTY—The Early Birds—By Montfort Amory

Betty and Mary, out for an early Spring stroll, are watching the return of the feathered migrants. "They are probably very hungry," says Betty.

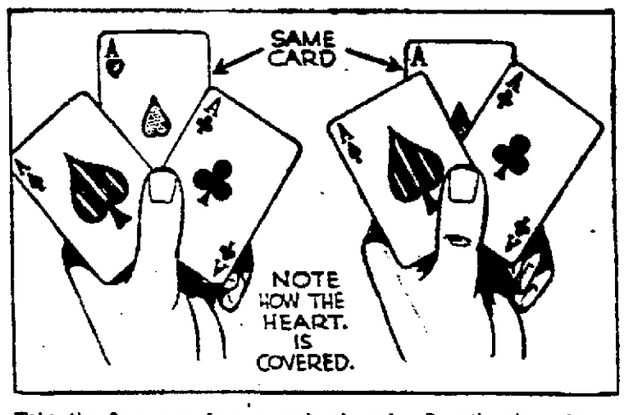

The girls decide to make homes for at least a few of the early arrivals, and we see them here putting on the finishing touches to their bird houses.

"I think they will like these houses," says Mary. "Everything is so barren that they are sure to look for nice snug places to build their nests."

Having left a few choice tid-bits, berries and strips of suet, to tempt the birds, the girls conceal themselves to watch for the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Bluebird.

TRICKS of MAGIC EXPLAINED by Will L. Lindhorst

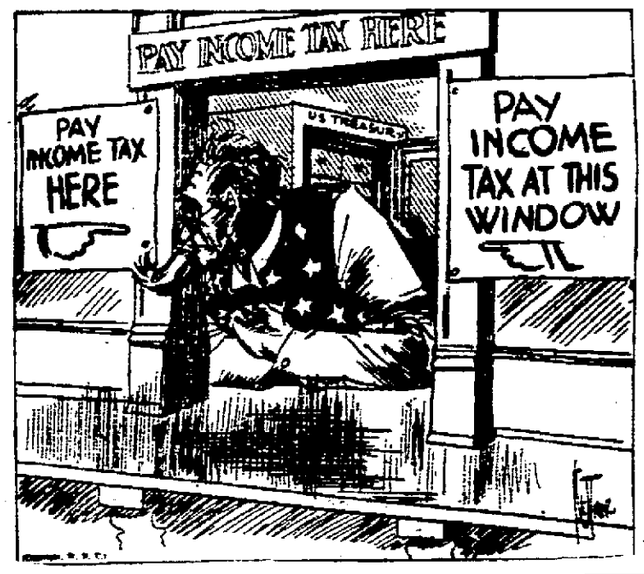

HOW TO MAKE AN ACE DISAPPEAR IN DECK

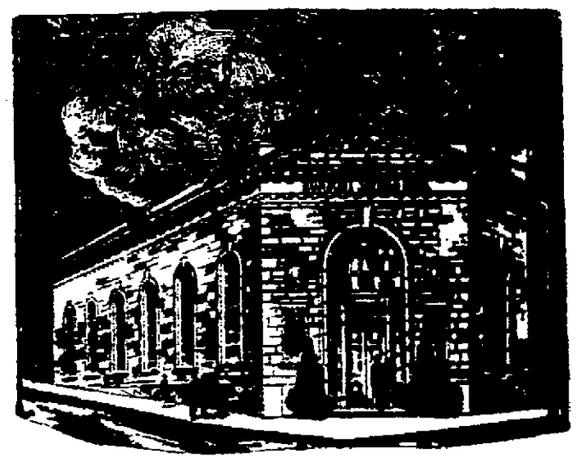

Take the four aces from a pack of cards. Secretly place the ace of diamonds in your pocket and hold the other three in fan shape arrangement, with the ace of hearts in the center with just the tip of the heart showing, making it appear like the ace of diamonds. Place the aces back in the pack, have the cards shuffled and announce that you will make the ace of diamonds disappear from the deck into your pocket. Somebody then searches through the deck and failing to find the ace reaches into your pocket and brings forth the missing card.

Crowds Throng to To See New Ford Car

Henry Ford's presentation for 1932 arrived in Kingston Thursday afternoon about 4 o'clock from the Ford plant at Edgewater, N. J., and during the remainder of the day thousands of people visited the salesrooms of James Millard and Son Company on Broadway at Prince street to examine the new V-8 Ford car.

The car, a portion of a shipment of Fords which left the big Ford plant on trailers, was delivered at the local Ford showroom later than had been expected but there was a large crowd present to greet the newcomer. No sooner had word been spread that the new Ford had arrived than there was a rush of cars to the Millard plant. Within a few minutes after the car had arrived there were hundreds of cars parked about the plant and traffic was delayed at that point by the sudden rush to see the new Ford.

The car, a Fordoor sedan model, was delivered at the showroom and immediately surrounded by an eager throng intent on a close inspection. For several minutes the crowds pressed forward and it was impossible to unload the car. This was accomplished and the car was run under its own power on the showroom floor where it was immediately placed on display. Even the formality of wiping the dirt and dust from the car was postponed.

Throughout the afternoon and evening there was a constant stream of people to inspect the car. A count was kept of the people and from the time the car arrived until the showrooms were closed over 2,000 people had entered the show-room.

Again today the place was busy with people intent on seeing what Henry Ford was offering. This model is the standard coach model. Additional models are expected next week and delivery will commence within the next couple of weeks as the model is now in production at the several Ford plants.

People who knew the old model T Ford car will find a vast difference in appearance and performance. The new V-8 is so designed that vibration has practically been eliminated. One of the tests made on the show-room floor is to stand a fountain pen on end on the fender and race the motor. The pen remains erect.

On the de luxe models all glass is shatterproof.

The new improved four model will arrive later and be placed on display. The prices of the V-8 Ford range from $460 for the roadster to $650 for the convertible sedan with the prices of the four cylinder jobs $50 less f. o. b. the factory. Fourteen body types are included in the line.

Address of those desiring a demonstration will be taken at the showroom and as soon as cars are received these demonstrations will be given.

ACTIVITIES FOR ULSTER GRANGE OF ULSTER PARK

Ulster Grange of Ulster Park has been invited by Highland Grange, No. 888, to meet with them on Monday evening, April 4, at 8 o'clock. As many members as possible from Ulster Grange are requested to accept this kind invitation. The program will be in charge of the lecturers of Highland and Ulster Granges.

The regular meeting of Ulster Grange will be held on Wednesday evening, April 6, at 8 o'clock. The program will be in charge of Worthy Lecturer Walter Herring, and the refreshment committee will be composed of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Herring, chairmen; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kurdt, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Doyle, Mrs. Elmer Elsworth, W. W. Whitson, Lillian von Bartheld and Charles E. Schultz. A full attendance is looked for at this meeting.

At the meeting on April 20, the first and second degrees will be conferred on a class of candidates. A degree team has recently been organized, and it is hoped they will assist at this initiation.

YOUR HOME and YOU

COLOR IN STATIONERY

SOME very conventional women look askance upon tinted or colored stationery. They will use nothing but white themselves and consider nothing more colorful than a pale gray or a pale cream for anyone else.

But still the real pleasure of colorful note paper goes merrily on and still thousands of women use it. Sometimes a single box of paper contains tints of five or six sorts to be used according to the mood of the writer.

To the woman who indulges in papers of various types pure white should be used only when there is call for unusual dignity and formality. It is used for formal invitations, weddings and receptions, is suited to the letter of social obligations, the formal note of congratulation, as well as the note of condolence.

For a more ardent and less formal letter of congratulation you should use a shade of rose or coral deeper than the pink shade. This typifies joyousness and gayety. Never use rose or pink paper unless you wish to express sentiments of love, fondness or devotion. It is quite appropriate for the love letter or the letter you write to a girl friend to whom you are devoted.

Tones of blue are best suited to notes between friends who are trusted and true. It should be chosen by the girl when writing to a man whom she wishes to give the impression of friendship and loyalty, rather than sentiment and romance.

Tints of violet are, like pink, rather sentimental, but there is a wistfulness and thoughtfulness expressed in the violet tints that are possessed by no other tones.

Gray note paper is suitable for social and business letters when white is not desired. It gives the impression of seriousness and sedateness, and at the same time looks "interesting."

Cream tints are suitable for rather informal notes of invitation, as this tint expresses cordiality and good will.

Buff tints are most appropriate to the athletic, out-of-door girl.

ON THE FLOOR

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

Wide awake I seem to be,
Lying quiet, counting sheep,
Nothing seems to make me sleep,
Far from noises of the town,
In a bed as soft as down,
Yet I roll and toss about;

Then I think about the floor,
Where I slept in days of yore,
Where I used to slumber some
Night the company would come.
Then our house was much too small,
Few the beds, to hold them all,
And we children, with delight,
Slept upon the floor that night.

Blanket, pillow, these I find,
And, upon the floor reclined,
Fall asleep, and wake at three
Glad again a bed to see,
Sleep again, and waken lame,
Just as certain just the same
I'd have stayed awake till four
If I hadn't tried the floor.

"United States of America"

In the Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1776, the British colonies which had revolted, described themselves as the "Thirteen United States of America." Officially the name is "United States of America" (used as a singular and not as a plural), but "United States" has become accepted as the name of the country. Usage has made the inhabitants "Americans" in distinction from other inhabitants of North and South America.

Badge of Famous Order

The Maltese cross was originally the badge of the Knights of Malta, a religious and military organization which resided on the Island of Malta after it was expelled from Rhodes by the Turks. This cross is formed of four barbed arrowheads with the points meeting in the center. In modified and elaborate forms it is the badge of several modern orders.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Financial And Commercial

New York, April 1 (AP).—Wall Street was still depressed today by the House of Representatives' approval of a stiff tax on stock transfers, but only scattered selling appeared in the share market.

The first day of the new ruling on loaning stocks to shorts had but little effect on the market. The list advanced a point or two here and there in the morning, then slowly settled back. Interest remained centered on Washington, and shares of some companies manufacturing products subject to proposed special levies were under pressure, notably the motors. But the list as a whole held up well, and trading was sluggish.

The public utilities were again under pressure. North American and Standard Gas dropped a couple of points to new lows. Eastman and Coca Cola each slumped more than 3 points, presumably reflecting the proposed tax on beverages and cameras.

American Telephone, however, held up well. It rose 2 points in an early upturn, then gave up most of its gain, but held above last night's close. U. S. Steel rose 1¼, then reacted. Allied Chemical lost a couple of points.

U. S. Treasury estimates indicating that the House bill is still rather far short of meeting the requirements found considerable support in Wall Street. For instance, brokers estimate that the tax on stock transfers, based on the recent volume of trading, would produce little more than $30,000,000 of revenue, rather than the $75,000,000 claimed for it.

Stock brokers were mostly inclined to look for a protracted period of quiet markets. Some also expressed the opinion that extending the income taxes to dividends would divert investment buying from stocks to tax exempt bonds.

While Wall Street was feeling depressed over so many things, there was little in the day's business and trade news to brighten the outlook, although the weekly mercantile reviews said that the warmer weather had quickened retail movement of spring merchandise, and some quarters were optimistic over the prospects of the intensive automobile sales campaigns which are now starting.

New Developments In Lindbergh Case

Norfolk, Va., April 1 (AP).—Rear-Admiral Guy H. Burrage, retired, said today that there has been a new development since yesterday in the negotiations for the return of the kidnaped Lindbergh baby.

The admiral, spokesman for three Norfolk men acting as intermediaries for the child's return, declined to indicate the nature of the development, saying its publication "would hinder negotiations."

His statement was made at the morning press conference.

Hopewell, N. J., April 1 (AP).—State police announced today that Major Schoeffel, assistant to Colonel H. Norman Schwarzkopf, sailed for Europe a week ago in connection with the search for the kidnaped Lindbergh baby.

Col. Schwarzkopf, who made the announcement, refused to give the name of the boat on which Schoeffel sailed, or to designate the port for which he is headed. He promised to give "more details" in his next regular bulletin late this afternoon.

Philadelphia, April 1 (AP).—Private detectives maintained a watch over a house here early today in a vain hope that they might find some clew to the Lindbergh kidnaping case. Its location was not revealed.

The information on which they acted was received at the Central Detective Bureau, Brooklyn, N. Y., on March 18 when two men called on Morton Bernstein, the manager, and told him to watch the house.

The said a blue sedan would stop there and that a man and a woman would get out.

"If you crash the door you may find the Lindbergh baby," the informants said, and walked out.

They were trailed and the information obtained in this way made the detectives believe their "tip" might be of some value.

Bernstein and Samuel Krasnow, a detective, called at the Lindbergh home yesterday and had a conference with representatives of Col. Lindbergh. Then they came to Philadelphia.

Normal Income Tax Rate on Dividends Paid Upon Stocks

Washington, April 1 (AP).—The House today adopted an amendment to apply the normal income tax rate to dividends paid on stocks, estimated to swell the total of the revenue bill by $50,000,000.

The standing vote was 133 to 90.

At about the time that Speaker Garner was calling the treasury estimate "unfair," the committee was approving an amendment to subject dividends from stocks to the normal income tax rate.

Mills estimated that the bill as it stands now would lack $165,000,000 of balancing the budget because the appropriations for the next fiscal year could not be trimmed $243,000,000 as the committee had estimated.

Garner, in a conference with newspapermen, said that "if Mr. Hoover and Mr. Mills would cooperate we could reduce expenses $250,000,000 without the least trouble."

"Instead of having that cooperation, every cabinet member is going over to the Senate and yowling that we are ruining their departments," he said. "How are you going to get anywhere when that happens?

"These same cabinet officers and Mr. Hoover could save that $250,000,000 themselves if they wanted to. They refuse to do it. It could be done, it ought to be done and it will be done."

WEST SHOKAN.

West Shokan, April 1.—How frequently may be noted in weather conditions that one extreme follows another. Closely on the heels of the big blizzard, came a heavy rain storm Thursday afternoon and evening. The snow surely took a beating under the counter action of pouring rain and balmy southerly winds. Tributary streams are pouring full head into the raving old Esopus, all of which find a ready outlet in the reservoir.

Town of Olive folks are feeling more than a bit elated, and well they may after the long hold out on the part of New York city, which finally had to come across and pay their Ashokan reservoir taxes. Regardless of political affiliations a preponderance of Olive residents join in grateful response to the steadfast efforts on the part of Supervisor Chester Lyons, and Martin J. Every, chairman of the board of assessors, as well to the other members and to the town board, which stood four square in support of these worthy leaders in the movement. No wonder Chet and Mart are wearing a cheery smile these days.

After a several years residence in Kingston, Mrs. Maud Graves is moving back to her country home here. Since the property was vacated in January, new plumbing and heating fixtures have been installed by Contractor Edwin Gessner of Olive Bridge.

While attending the burial of his grandmother, Mrs. Rachel Miller, in the snow bound Bushkill cemetery on Tuesday, Wilson Terwilliger, the friendly milk truck driver, had the misfortune to tear the rear end out of his Nash sedan. The damaged machine was removed to Watson Hollow garage. Pretty tough luck right after a 35 dollar overhauling job on the motor, but generally trouble comes in bunches.

Edwin Gessner of Olive Bridge recently visited his mother, who is ill at her home in New Jersey.

The Ladies' Aid Society met at the church on Wednesday and had an all-day quilting bee. There was a very good attendance and everyone had a fine time. There were two quilts on the racks, so there was no time for busy fingers to slacken their pace. As the ladies were becoming a bit tired after working diligently all morning, who should appear at the doorway but Ernie Constable. He had heard that the ladies were having a quilting party, so he thought he would just drop in on 'em and see how they were coming along with their work. Ernie's ability and willingness at singing is unquestionable, so almost before Ernie could find a seat someone asked him to sing them a song. The favorite rendition was "I Don't Work for a Living", Ernie's theme song. Just maybe those ladies didn't give him a hilarious applause. And then to show his appreciation Ernie sang a few other songs, among which were, "I'll Bet You I'll Hang Up That Picture" and "She's Coming 'Round the Mountain". After hearing all these lively songs, the luncheon was served, which consisted of a most pleasing variety of delicacies. Another all day's quilting will be held next Wednesday and a large turnout is expected, for there will be plenty of work to be done, as well as lots of good things to eat.

Irving Healey was a busy Kingston shopper on Wednesday.

Word has been received from one of the former school teachers, Miss Bertha Merrill, that she is just recovering from a severe attack of the grip. However, Miss Merrill doesn't believe in taking any chances, so she did not attend school on Monday, due to the snowy weather. She took good advantage of her well-earned vacation and doctored herself up, and now she is feeling quite herself again.

Mr. and Mrs. John Toman and baby, called on Mr. and Mrs. John Whalen of Brown Station one day this week. Mrs. Whalen is recovering from an attack of grip.

John Mosher of Main street was a caller at West Shokan Heights on Thursday.

Mrs. Mathias Burgher presented Mrs. Philip Dwyer a beautiful bouquet of pink roses on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hershel Geyer called on Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson on Wednesday. Mrs. Geyer is spending the remainder of the week with her parents, while her husband is attending business at Albany.

Mouse at Home Anywhere

The common house mouse is a native of Europe or Central Asia and is readily distinguishable from the native white-footed mice of North America by its nearly uniform brownish color, explains Pathfinder Magazine. It is now found in nearly every country in the world and its distribution is apparently limited only by the Arctic and Antarctic circles.

HEM-ROID banishes piles by removing the cause. It stimulates the circulation in the lower bowel—drives out the stale impure blood, heals and restores the affected parts.

Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID has an almost unbelievable record of success right in this city. So why waste time on external remedies or worry about an operation when McBride Drug Stores invite every Pile sufferer to try HEM-ROID with guarantee of money-back if it does not end their Piles no matter how stubborn the case?

In Memoriam

In memory of our dear son and brother, Frederick J. Kallaway, who departed from us 4 years ago today, April 1, 1928.

Just a thought of sweet remembrance.
Just a memory fond and true.
Just a token of affection.
And a heartache still for you.
Just a sigh for olden moments,
Just a smile for love anew.
Just a tear in silence falling.
And a yearning just for you.

Wells Family Had Hard Luck

The fire that destroyed the residence of Walter Wells on Albany avenue extension on Wednesday night left the family with only the clothes on their backs, as the house and its contents were a total loss. Mr. Wells stated Thursday that he and his wife did not realize until misfortune struck them what a large number friends they had as the telephone in an adjoining neighbor's house had rung all day with persons calling up and offering assistance.

Mrs. Wells and her daughter, Shirley, had gone out Wednesday evening for dinner at a friend's house, and Mr. Wells had gone to the Albany Avenue Garage to spend the evening until his family returned home.

Mr. Wells said that fortunately his garage in the rear of the house was saved by the Kingston Fire Department, and that he and his family would use the garage for temporary living quarters until they had time to make further arrangements.

WILDCAT BOUNTIES ENRICH TRAPPERS

Steel Traps Click Dollar Tunes Throughout Maine.

Augusta, Maine.—Steel traps have clicked a cash register song throughout the state of Maine during the past year, reducing the number of wildcats by nearly 1,000 and enriching the trappers to the extent of nearly $15,000.

The forest felines, wildest of the wild creatures sought by sportsmen, as elusive as shadows when stalked by the man with a gun, have suffered heavy casualties in traps because of a weakness which they share with humans—the desire for something for nothing.

When roaming the woods in search of his natural food, live game, the wildcat enjoys comparative safety, for his habitat breeds no animals capable of engaging him in combat and he is gifted with uncanny ability to sense the presence of and evade his most deadly enemy—man.

But the tawny untamable, like his two-legged foe, usually finds the lure of "something for nothing" most difficult to resist. Thus the success of trappers on capturing the game that seems to meow in derision at rifles and shotguns. Thus the cash register song, echoing along the traplines, a dirge for the cats, but a joyful chorus for those to whom it means "shoes for the baby."

Each time the jaws of a cat trap snap together the state parts with $20 in bounty money. The cat, snarling in rage and pain, has his fury aggravated by the discovery that the bait—food which he had attempted to seize without earning it through the usual stalk and kill, "something for nothing"—is just beyond the reach of his paws.

Mammoth Telescope May Find New Stellar Plan

San Francisco.—Belief that a new stellar system, millions of light-years away from the earth, may be discovered with the new 200-inch telescope to be erected at Mount Wilson, was advanced here recently by Dr. Willem de Sitter, astronomer at the University of Leyden, Holland.

"Recent findings," he said, "lead us to a conception of the universe free from the finite limits hitherto imposed upon it by astronomers. The universe is greater than we ever imagined. It may be infinite.

"I doubt if anything resembling human life will be found on any other planet, but I think it probable that man, in the future, may be able to travel from the earth to other planets."

The proposed Mount Wilson telescope, twice as powerful as the largest telescope in use at present, will be eventually superseded by instruments twice as large again, Doctor de Sitter predicted.

Earl's Gold Sword Sold to London Bullion Firm

London.—A field marshal's sword, sheathed in solid gold and with a gold-studded hilt, has been sold to the London Bullion company by persons taking advantage of the present monetary situation to profit by gold disposal.

It was understood that the sword was the one presented to the late Earl of Ypres, then Sir John French, after the Boer war. The blade was presented by the citizens of Kimberley in 1901 in gratitude for the action of the earl, who led a series of cavalry charges to lift the siege of the city.

The new owners said they had no intention of melting the sword, but probably would offer it to the citizens of Kimberley.

Round Table Volume Contains Million Words

London.—Reports of proceedings of the second session of the Indian Round Table conference, including verbatim speeches, fill a volume of more than a million words. The Bible is about 25 per cent shorter.

It is estimated that during the first and second sessions more than two and a half million words were spoken. At least another half million will be spoken by the time the round table proceedings are finished in a third and final session in 1934.

Postal Savings Make Big Jump in 3 Years

Washington. — Postal savings deposits have increased more than $500,000,000 in the last three years, Commerce department figures reveal. The growth of postal savings is considered by government financial experts to be one of the recent major features of national banking. In January, 1929, deposits totaled $153,517,000. By January, 1932, they had increased to $653,051,000. Banking experts believe bank failures and the fact that postal savings are backed by the federal government are responsible for this growth.

Snuff Boxes From Beans

Beans large enough to be made into snuff boxes with the addition of a lid of pewter or lead, have been found on Foula Island, in the Shetlands, which has come into the limelight of late. The Bonxie or Skua gull, an Arctic bird of great beauty and power, has also been seen there.

Brooklyn Hardest Hit by Illness of Valuable Players

Bissonnette and O'Doul, Regulars, in Hospital—Red Sox, Yanks, Philly Nationals, Giants and Athletics Also Have Important Players Out.

New York, April 1 (AP).—It's a rare and happy baseball manager today who can count on having his strongest line-up available for the opening of the major league season.

Injuries, operations, illness and even death have cut sharply into the roster of eligibles since the training camps sprouted a month ago. With a fortnight to go there probably will be more casualties.

Brooklyn, with two regulars out for an indefinite period, appears to have been hardest hit. Del Bissonette, regular first baseman, is in the hospital after an operation on the Achilles tendon and may not be available for months. Frank (Lefty) O'Doul, slugging outfielder, is nursing a bruised right hand that is calculated to keep him out at least until the season begins.

The Boston Red Sox will line up April 11 against Washington without two players Manager Collins had counted on. Big Ed Morris, veteran pitcher, was fatally stabbed the day he was to have left for camp, and George Stumpf, a promising outfielder purchased from Quincy, Ill., is in bed with intestinal influenza.

Yankees Hit

An operation for appendicitis cost the New York Yankees the services of Pitcher Henry Johnson until well up in the campaign and it is doubtful even then he will be of much value to the club.

Yankee adherents are viewing with the customary alarm a "kink" that settled in Babe Ruth's neck the other day and is forcing the big fellow to carry his head at half mast.

Two of the Philadelphia Nationals' four first line pitchers are returning from the south in doubtful condition. Jim Elliott is wearing a slab of porous plaster on his back and groaning with every pitch, while Chse Dudley is nursing a sore arm. Chuck Klein, the Phils' powerhouse, has a pair of ailing ankles.

McGraw in Difficulty

John McGraw is having much difficulty getting all his New York Giants on the field at the same time. Johnny Vergez, third baseman, is on the bench with an injured knee cap and Catcher Frank Hogan also has an uncertain knee, aggravated by a vast surplus of weight that refuses to come off. Adding to McGraw's troubles is the fact that Second Baseman Hughie Critz still can't get the old whip in his throwing arm. The Giants are reported to be scouting around for another second baseman and another catcher.

Mickey Cochrane, the Athletics' brilliant catcher, is going about in carpet slippers after an operation on an infected foot, but will be ready by opening day if there are no complications. Alvin Crowder, Washington righthander, has been called home by illness in his family and may not return until after the race starts.

Prospects Bright For Johnny Murphy

Former Colonial Pitcher Beats House of David 2-0, Allowing Three Hits and Fanning Six Batters.

According to a report by The Associated Press, at the start of training, Johnny Allen and Walter Brown seemed to be the best Yankee pitching prospects, but today John Murphy was on top due to his three-hit victory over the House of David team at St. Petersburg, Fla., Wednesday. Manager Joe McCarthy was boosting Paul Andrews as one of the best and Babe Ruth favored Frank Nekola.

Murphy, former Fordham University star and ace hurler of the former Kingston Colonials when that team played some of the best semi-pro nines in the business, sheared the House of David so closely that the bewhiskered boys scored nary a run and snared only three hits. Six of the Davids fanned.

Besides turning in the brilliant pitching performance, Johnny Murphy connected for a double and made one of the New York scores. The Yankees won the game 2-0.

Comforters Play Redeemers Saturday

At Comforter Hall, Wynkoop Place, Saturday night, the Comforter basketball team will meet the powerful Redeemer five of the Sunday School League, starting at 8:30 o'clock. Previous to the feature there will be a game between the girls' teams of the Christian Endeavor Society of the church, beginning at 7:30.

For the main event the teams will line up as follows: Redeemers—Fox and Houghtaling, forwards; F. Schline, center; F. Schline and Houghtaling, guards. Comforter—Roosa and Haines, forwards; W. Van Bramer, center; Webber and Whitmore, guards.

TORONTO WELL ON WAY FOR HOCKEY TITLE

Montreal, April 1 (AP).—The Toronto Maple Leafs, who have been candidates for hockey's highest honors for several seasons but failed to make the grade, appeared well on their way to the final series against the New York Rangers for the ancient Stanley Cup today.

Mathematically, the Leafs and the Montreal Maroons were even in their "semi-final" battle for the right to meet the new National Hockey League champions. They tied at one goal each last night in the first clash of their two-game total goal series. But the advantage today appeared to be all Toronto's. The second game will be played Saturday night on the Leaf's home ice.

A Veteran Rookie —By Pap

All Rights Reserved by The Associated Press

SPORT SLANTS

By Alan J. Gould

(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

No one knows the uncertainty of baseball, or the fickleness of its fortunes better than the veteran, Connie Mack.

Connie can recall the dark days when sports writers said the Athletics never would get anywhere until he quit the management of the club.

Three straight pennants are behind him, the prospect of a fourth in succession just ahead, but Mack retains quite vividly the recollection of "breaks" that cost his team the chance to win the 1931 world's series and, thereby, shatter major league precedent.

He told the Rotary Club of St. Petersburg about it. He revealed how the Athletics beat Paul Derringer, the young Cardinal pitching star, by waiting out the curve ball he started off with so successfully and then walloping his fast one.

He described how Waite Hoyt, in the fifth game, accidentally put a curve ball in the groove which Pepper Martin hit into the stands, after the instructions were for Hoyt to pitch only high fast ones to the young outfield star.

One Inning Defeat.

"We were never more confident than before the seventh and last game," said Mack. "The Athletics had won the sixth game easily, as you know, and with Earnshaw in the box we had every reason to feel optimistic.

"But we were beaten in the very first inning. High, the first batter, who nearly always hit hard to right or short into left, raised a short fly between Williams and Simmons. I had previously motioned Al to move in but he refused to budge, due perhaps to his uncertainty about the visibility and his confidence in his ability to come in better than he could go back. The result was that he missed by a few feet a ball he would otherwise have caught easily.

"Then Watkins, the second batter, hit another short fly over toward the third base line. Williams went after it and it looked like an easy catch. Suddenly he stoppel in his tracks as someone—from the Cardinal bench—yelled 'Simmons.' The ball fell safe.

"Let me explain here that if the situation had been reversed and the Cardinals were in the field, our boys would have yelled the same thing from our bench.

"But that put two men on and, as you know, the Cardinals scored two runs, one on a ball that got away from Cochrane and the other on a poor throw back to the plate by Foxx after Cochrane had dropped the third strike on Orsatti. You see, we missed four chances to stop any scoring in that inning.

"Those two runs gave Grimes the confidence he needed to pitch great ball and also inspired the Cardinals. I will say my club was game, right down to the last inning, when we nearly came through, but we were beaten by a great ball club."

Connie Satisfied.

"My boys," as Connie calls them, have done pretty well, however, for three years.

Mack gets his greatest satisfaction out of the development of players like Simmons, Grove, Cochrane, Earnshaw and Foxx. They are the diamonds in the crown of his retiring years.

But the "tall tutor" has no thought of when he may quit baseball. He can think of little else when spring comes around.

"Why, I can not even take any real interest in my golf now," he admits.

The sincerity of this is clear when it is considered that Mack plays well down in the 80's on the links. His last round was 42-42—84.

Downtown Billiard Contest Tonight

The inter-parlor series between the representatives of Williams and Sapp contesting against players from the DeCicco billiard room continues tonight at the latter place where Bobby Hart defends the home banner against Marty Cohen of the Williams and Sapp contingent. The DeCicco brigade now shows the way in the tournament.

Bouts Tonight at The Servicenter

Tonight at the Servicenter, Broadway and Pine Grove avenue, Jack Sullivan of Marlborough, former champion of the Amateur Federation, will try to regain the heavyweight laurels that he lost to Jack Wright of Peekskill some time ago. The southern Ulster boy in his comeback faces Willie Barrow, hard hitting Poughkeepsie negro, who has not lost a fight since starting his amateur career and has 11 knockouts to his credit.

Supporting the feature is a brilliant card, the first match of which is scheduled for 8:30 o'clock, and which promises plenty of action. The program follows:

Six Rounds

Coke Costello, Port Ewen, vs. Joe Scott, Beacon.

Joe Ferrone, Beacon, vs. Harry Porter, Poughkeepsie.

Four Rounds

Buddie Emerson, Port Ewen, vs. Willie Quintiana, Marlborough.

Joe Turck, Kingston, vs. Stanley Mosloski, Newburgh.

Sam (Dusic) Jackson, Kingston, vs. Joe Benjamin, Saugerties.

Fay Kaizer, New Paltz, vs. Izzy Feldman, Ellenville.

Return Bouts

Both of the six rounders are return matches, Joe Scott having defeated Coke Costello on a technical knockout because of a cut over his eye, and Joe Ferrone boxed a draw with Harry Porter, who knocked out Paul Paulacain two weeks ago at the Servicenter. Scott stopped Gabe Vosdick of Saugerties on the same card.

2 Sunday School Matches at the "Y"

At the Y. M. C. A. tonight Sunday School Basketball League games will be played as follows:

Congregationals vs. St. James at 7 o'clock.

Redeemer vs. Trinity at 8 o'clock.

Cleveland Hitters Please Pilot

Roger Peckinpaugh, Cleveland manager, and three of the boys expected to drive in plenty of runs during the coming campaign are pictured above. The trio are: Willie Kamm, third; Johnny Hodapp, second, and Eddie Morgan, first baseman. Threats of their jobs as regulars have the latter two taking mighty swipes at the ball.

This Game of Golf

By O. B. KEELER

This correspondent had just about completed getting up a sufficient head of steam over Miss Mary Rogers of Jacksonville to burst into type with the prediction that at last we had another girl golfer in Dixie who might possibly follow in the distinguished footsteps of Alexa Stirling. And look what happened.

It was in a way embarassing to me, though I am not at all going to admit that Miss Rogers is not as good as I was thinking she was, because—well, you may see from the rest of the narrative that this would get me in dutch with somebody else, also.

The Setting.

It was this way.

Down at St. Augustine the other day, this tall, rather gangling, happy and ingenuous 20-year-old youngster encountered Helen Hicks, national champion, in the Florida East Coast event, and she took Miss Hicks to the 18th green before yielding, 1 down.

Added to some things Miss Rogers already had done in golf, this excited plenty of comment around in our section. When Miss Rogers decided to compete in the first Radium Springs open championship for women at the Radium Springs club, near Albany, Ga., there was a lot of interest in her performance.

Miss Beatrice Gottlieb of New York, Miss Margaret Maddox of Atlanta, city and state champion, and others of some renown were in the tourney.

It looked like a great chance for Miss Rogers to display some more of her ability, about which, I admit freely, I was getting pretty enthusiastic.

So Miss Rogers qualified well up toward the top of the list.

Mrs. O. B. Keeler, wife of this correspondent, who was covering the tournament in his stead, also managed to get into the championship division, and wrote modestly enough in her story next day that she was greatly pleased by the happy chance that paired her with Miss Rogers.

Mrs. K. said she would enjoy seeing the new phenomenon play, and hoped she might manage to carry the match into the second nine.

Upset.

Then all she did was start on that tough course 4-4-4 against Miss Rogers; turn 1 up; and win at the last green by that margin, after the Jacksonville star had squared at the 17th green of a really terrific battle.

This performance afforded both Mrs. K. and myself an acute problem for the stories the following day. Of course she had to write the story, and she did it very well indeed, I thought.

But I, to be honest, had to say that the visitor was a plump little middle-aged lady who didn't take up golf until she was just about twice Miss Rogers' present age—which was the solemn truth.

I added, which was also the truth, that Bobby Jones in his palmiest days never afforded me more of a kick out of a golf match.

Neither Mrs. K. nor I consider that she (Mrs. K.) is quite the equal of Miss Helen Hicks, though she certainly beat the same opponent by the same margin on a tougher course than Miss Hicks won on.

But I do say it was, like the Battle of Blenheim, a famous victory.

Chervenka Bows To Tellier, 100-24

Julius Tellier scored his second victory of the quarter finals in the Kingston pocket billiard championships Thursday night at the Kaslich parlor over Rudy Chervenka, who was way off form. Final score of the 34 inning match was 100-24, one of the most unbalanced of the tournament in which Chervenka, East Kingston favorite, is no longer a contestant because of his defeat. There is no match scheduled for tonight.

Following the battle of the cues, Joe Belsky, Russian strong man, pleased the crowd with feats of strength such as tearing several packs of playing cards at the same time, ripping up books of considerable thickness and bending iron. Saturday night he will appear at the parlor of Williams and Sapp, lower Hasbrouck avenue, giving an exhibition at 8:30 o'clock.

The famous Masked Marvel will be at the Kaslich parlor, Wall and John streets, Monday night to play a local expert or several of them in addition to giving a demonstration of trick and fancy shots.

Fuller Favored To Defeat Berg

New York, April 1 (AP).—Sentiment may be with Jack (Kid) Berg in his ten round bout with Sammy Fuller of Boston in Madison Square Garden tonight but hard cash favors the New England youngster.

Odds as high as 2 to 1 have been quoted that Fuller will outpoint the British veteran and perhaps earn a shot at Tony Canzoneri's lightweight championship.

The betting ring, which seldom allows sentiment to mix with business, evidently believes that Berg is decidedly on the down grade and that he no longer possesses the speed he will need to offset Fuller's unrelenting attack.

SCHRYVERS FORFEIT TO ROSE & GORMAN BOWLERS

Hand of Time Falls on Historic Scottish Oak

The old "Convenanters' oak" at Dalzell, Scotland, which has weathered the blasts of storm and time for centuries, met with mishap recently. A violent windstorm bereft the famous "auld aik tree of Dalyel" of much of its ancient grandeur. The "Preacher's oak," as it is sometimes called, is known to visitors and picnic parties to the beautiful seat of Lord Hamilton of Dalzell as an object of great historic interest. In the troublous religious times of long ago it is on record that the ousted minister of Dalzell was sheltered and protected by the laird of Dalzell as far as possible, and that he secretly visited the parish and preached to his people from the great oak in front of Dalzell house. The great branches of the tree—each the size of an ordinary tree—grow from the top of the stem, which at four and a half feet from the ground is twenty-one feet in circumference.

Good Reading

A good book is like a symphony, some passages will strike one as glorious, at the first hearing, which a second reveals as commonplace, whereas this movement, this chapter, which sounds only blurry, at the second hearing develops into the most exquisite music of the afternoon.

The plain fact is, as every reader knows, that sometimes an interesting "quotation" will elude one and never be found again. Perhaps it is just as well. It is good to know, in small affairs, that our searching is not always fruitful, that we cannot always be successful. Failure is just as inherent in the scheme of things as success. The great book of common sense teaches one that.—Charles E. Tracewell, in the Washington Star.

Pioneer Mince Pies

Tradition states that mince pies were originally oval in shape, to represent the cradle in which the Holy Child was laid, and the medieval cooks filled them with the choicest and costliest of meats, all shredded and minced together, as emblems of the gifts of the Three Wise Men. For centuries they occupied the place of honor on the baronial table, and in an old Fourteenth century manuscript we find the following recipe: "Take a pheasant, a hare, a capon, and two pigeons, take out as many bones as may be, and chop them up fine, add the livers and hearts, two kidneys of sheep, salt, pepper, spice, and vinegar. Put the meat into a crust made craftily into the likeness of a bird's body, close it up and bake well."

Law of Little Value

The long-established American custom of permitting works of art over one hundred years old to come in free of any customs duty has not been entirely nullified, but several countries have lessened its value by censoring exportation of antiques. Italy has stringent rules and Spain has recently absolutely forbidden sales of such objects abroad. If works of art over one hundred years old are not permitted to leave their countries of origin, it is of no value to have them duty-free here.—Exchange.

HOW

LIGHT ARRANGEMENT MAY HELP THE COLOR-BLIND.—It has been asserted that a cat sees the world only in black and white, and that only men, dogs, and birds have reached the four-color stage.

Here is an experiment which illustrates the evolution of your vision with regard to color. Take a blue card in your right hand and a yellow one in your left and try to look at them at the same time with different eyes. You will see a dirty white or a competition between the two colors. You will see neither blue nor yellow definitely. Red and green cards in place of blue and yellow produce a yellowish color or a similar composition.

A well-known professor now suggests that if a little orange were introduced into red lights and a little blue into the green, slightly color-blind people would be able to distinguish between them.

How Changes in Season Cause Color Variation

The tendency of some animals to change color with the seasons like the foliage of trees, is explained by Dr. R. R. Heustis of the University of Oregon in the American Journal of Mammalogy.

Doctor Heustis found that the fur of certain western mice became progressively darker with the advance of cold weather. He also ascertained that the pigment responsible for fur color is contained in cells at the tips of the hairs, where it is most affected by the light. Thus it is the change in the nature and quantity of light with the advancing season that causes the change.

"A somewhat correlative change of color in the mouse," says Doctor Heustis, "accompanies the changing hues of vegetation as the season advances. It is just another instance of the intimate adjustment between the individual and the environment. The fading of the fur will accompany the decomposition of chlorophyll in the surrounding vegetation."

How Fish Swim

A series of interesting experiments has just disproved an old theory—that fish swim by means of their tails. It seems they can swim just as quickly if their tail fins are removed. It is actually the action of muscles on the sides of their bodies that sends them through the water, and this action starts from the head. But swimming is not the only form of motion of which fishes are capable. Some of them can come out of the water and walk—or even climb. A number of these walking fish arrived at the London zoo recently. They are mudskippers from Java. When out of water they use their breast fins as legs.

How Wreckers Lured Ships

Nags head is on the coast of North Carolina near Cape Hatteras. In Colonial times the famous pirate, Saxon Teach, known as Blackbeard, lived near there. He would fasten a lantern to a horse's head and, at night, the lantern bobbing up and down with the movement of the old nag's head, would look, from the sea, like a ship's light riding the waves. Other ships, thinking there was a channel or an anchorage, would follow and go ashore. The pirates then would take the disabled vessel.

How Copra Is Made

Copra is the dried meat of the coconut, which is detached from the shell after it is broken and dried. One thousand nuts yield from 440 to 550 pounds of copra, containing approximately 10 per cent of water. The copra is dried either by exposure to the air or sun, or by some artificial drying process, such as kiln drying or subjection to a current of hot air in a heated tunnel.

How to Transfer Pictures

To transfer pictures, a wax may be made from three parts beeswax, three parts tallow, one part each Canadian balsam and olive oil. Another method is to dissolve one and one-half drams yellow soap in a pint of hot water, adding three fluid ounces turpentine; this mixture is applied to the picture or printed matter, the blank sheet is dampened and subjected to pressure until design is transferred.

How We Get "Blimp"

The word "blimp" is said to have originated from "B." for "balloon," and "limp," to designate "limp balloon." A Zeppelin type dirigible has a rigid framework covered with fabric in which the gas is held in balloonettes. A blimp has only a rigid lower section and the pressure of the gas keeps the upper part filled out.

How to Solder Aluminum

Henley's Book of Formulas recommends first tinning the parts to be soldered, with a composition of five parts tin to one part aluminum, and then replacing the ordinary soldering iron by one of pure aluminum and soldering with a composition of copper, zinc and aluminum.

How Phrase Originated

"What is the origin of the saying 'left in the lurch'?" asks a correspondent. It arose when one player was left behind the other in the once popular game of cribbage. "Lurch" is a corruption of Lourche, a French game.

Proof of Birds' Journeys

Bird-banding is telling some queer stories of bird-wandering. A herring gull, banded at the Isles of Shoals, off the coast of New Hampshire, last July, turned up in Iowa on October 30; and another, banded at Biddeford, Maine, was found dead in New Brunswick.

NEWS OF TODAY IN KINGSTON

The construction of the New York State armory has progressed rapidly in the past month. It was reported by the contractors that 25 per cent of the foundation is complete and 75 per cent of the steel work erected. The giant structure of steel looks like the skeleton of a mythical animal.

However, this frame work is steadily being covered up. There are 30 brick layers and about 600,000 brick have been laid so far. The weather delayed the work of the brick layers and caused a halt in the erection of the steel supports because some of the steel work must be fastened into the wall. The cement working crew was also held up by the snow and rain. The poring of cement into forms is their job but too much water is just as bad as not enough.

The problem of water being in the boiler room of the building is just about at an end. A well point system and auxiliary pump have been in use to keep the water out, but now the well point system has been abolished and the auxiliary pump is being employed alone. This pump will also be released from service in the near future for the contractors are now in the process of installing water proof material in the room.

The riding hall is the first section of the armory that will be roofed and completed. This large section will not have any floor in it because it will be used for riding and drilling with guns and caissons. The hall is expected to be near completion by the middle of April. As for the armory itself the date for opening has been set at November 1.

There are now 125 men working on the armory, 65 laborers, 23 carpenters and 30 brick layers. This crew helps out the unemployment in this section considerably. The same number of men is kept working steadily.

The carpenters were held up for a day last week when the carpenter shed burned down. It destroyed quite a bit of material and tools. However, things are under way again with saws set and tools replaced.

The state has Leo Nyman, superintendent of construction, watching the progress of the armory. Mr. Nyman said yesterday, "It's anything but pleasant to watch construction on a day like this." He was right for the ground around the armory was nothing but mud, several inches deep.

The statistics presented by the Kingston Motor Vehicle Bureau is enough to make one believe that the depression is nothing but a mental state of the people for there are more pleasure cars in use this year than last.

There are 342 more private cars registered at the bureau this year than in 1931 at the corresponding time. Last year 13,462 private cars were registered, while this year the number is 13,804.

In the commercial ranks a slight decrease has been recorded. The decrease is 78. This proves, however, that in the commercial world the need for trucks has become less since the business has fallen.

There were 2,971 commercial vehicles on the road in 1931 and at the present time there are 2,893. It also might interest the truck owners to know that beginning in July they will have to pay $1.32 a 100 pounds. This is a 65 per cent increase over other years.

The special stamps issued by the government to commemorate the 60th anniversary of Arbor Day, April 22, are expected to be on sale here in the near future. The two-cent Arbor Day stamp will be printed in red, the same size as the two-cent current issue. It will show a tree at the left and one at the right, forming an arbor, across the top of the stamp. The words "U. S. Postage" will be found at the top with the value at the bottom. As a centerpiece there will be a young girl and boy planting a tree on a lawn with a house and woods in the background. The girl holds the small tree while the boy pats the earth in place with a spade. The stamp will also show the words "Arbor Day," with the dates 1872-1932.

Another movement is about to be started for the lowering of tolls on the Mid-Hudson Bridge. The Dutchess county realty board plans to organize Dutchess and Ulster county people in a drive to cut bridge tolls. A meeting will be called within the next two weeks.

A reduction has been announced in the new spring prices of coal for this vicinity.

Great Cathedral Hailed One of World's Wonders

The mosque of St. Sophia, at Constantinople, readers will recollect, was originally a Christian cathedral. It was founded by Constantine, and after suffering from several devastating conflagrations was rebuilt permanently in 532-37 by Justinian the Great, famous as the author of the Byzantine legal code.

Procopius avers in his Secret History that Justinian was of infernal parentage on the male side; but the emperor's devotion to at least the outward forms of religion suggests some prejudice on the part of the historian.

The edifice Justinian constructed on the ruins of its immediate predecessor, destroyed during a political row in the capital, was accounted one of the major wonders of the medieval world. Gibbon relates that "Anthemius formed the design and his genius directed the hands of 10,000 workmen, whose payment in pieces of fine silver was never delayed beyond the evening;" and he recounts how "the emperor himself, clad in linen tunic, surveyed each day their rapid progress and encouraged their diligence by his familiarity, his zeal and his rewards."

So the great cathedral was completed in five years, eleven months and ten days at a cost of what would amount to about $5,000,000 in modern money, an immense sum in the Sixth century. "And," says Gibbon, "in the midst of the solemn festival Justinian exclaimed with devout vanity 'Glory be to God, who hath thought me worthy to accomplish so great a work: I have vanquished thee, O Solomon.'"

Topsy-Turvy Woman

A woman who lived in a topsy-turvy world, who wrote, read, and spelt backwards, is mentioned in the British Medical Journal. She was admitted to the Devon County mental hospital suffering from fits and suicidal tendencies. It was found that in writing she reversed her words and when she drew pictures she drew them upside down. When she wanted to read she turned the book upside down. When she was asked to spell a word she spelt it backwards.

Finnish Capital

Helsingfors is the Swedish name of the capital city of the Finnish republic, which is called in Finnish "Helsinki." Finland was a grand duchy under the Russian empire until the World war, when it became an independent republic. The city of Helsinki is located at the southern end of the peninsula which constitutes the republic of Finland, on the north side of and across the Gulf of Finland from Leningrad, Russia.

Kingston DeMolay Honorary Chapter

The Colonial Chapter, Order of De Molay is in possession of a most enviable record. At the present time according to authentic reports received from the Grand Council at Kansas City, Missouri, the Kingston Chapter ranks third among the chapters in the state of New York with regard to the number of representative De Molays. Considering the vast number of De Molay chapters throughout the entire state, Colonial Chapter can be proud of such an honorable position.

The distinction of being designated as a Representative De Molay is one of the highest honors awarded a De Molay. It is bestowed not for rare attainments in any one thing but in recognition of a fine development of the qualities and capacities which go to make up an all-round individual of the age of DeMolays.

The order of De Molay encourages its members to make the most of any gifts they have. It places a special emphasis upon the development of a variety of worthwhile qualities so that life will be well balanced. In other words, the order stands for all around young manhood. The Grand Council presents to each Representative De Molay thus elected a beautiful recognition emblem especially designed for this honor. The pin consists of the shield of the order, encircled by a laurel wreath, supporting the word "representative" upon it. At the base of the wreath numerals show the year in which the award is made.

The following members are the young men who have attained the coveted distinction of Representative De Molay in previous years and who are responsible for the honorary standing of Colonial Chapter:

1929—Richard Bailey.
1930—Fred Carpenter.
1931—Joseph F. Ross, Jr.; Edward Whitaker.

From all indications the local chapter appears to be striving for even greater laurels for many members are working hard to win the award and advance Colonial Chapter to the top of the list.

"Who's Who" Eligibles

Who's Who in America says: "The standards of admission to Who's Who in America divide the eligibles into two classes: (1) Those who are selected on account of special prominence in creditable lines of effort, making them the subjects of extensive interest, inquiry, or discussion in this country; and (2) those who are arbitrarily included on account of official position—civil, military, naval, religious, or educational."—Washington Star.

Ulster Bar Pays Tribute To Eckert

an extreme—a taskmaster. It claimed a sacrifice. It demanded of him a monopoly of his time. It afforded him too little recreation, too little exercise, too little out of doors, too little play. It required investigation, research, study, reflection, the preparation which was the best he had to give for the battle.

This taskmaker rewarded him with an unusual success. He had achieved at the prime of life a professional mastery quite unrivalled at our bar. At the same time, this very earnestness laid a heavy levy upon his physical strength. It preyed upon it to such an extent that when disease attacked him it found him with his guards down unequal to sustain himself in the battle for his life. Human nature is not iron. It is clay. Do you think I am criticising his risk of his life? Far from it.

"Better fifty years of Europe than a cycle of Cathay."

He probably wrought a greater work in 43 years than such as I in seventy. The greatest accomplishments of men have been the product of the fire and imagination of youth. Jesus carried the Cross of the world to Calvary at thirty-three. At a like age Alexander had conquered the world. Tennyson's best poetry 'tis said was written before he was forty and General Grant ended the great struggle for the life of the Union at Appomattox at 43, the age of our friend at his death. But I had so hoped that he might have lived. He had won his way against great odds. He was so human. He had arrived at a position in society, and at the Bar where with his sympathy, understanding and generosity, the circle of his usefulness would have extended, if he had lived to vastly widen his spheres.

Looking with you my brethren out upon the great mystery of life, I think with you I am sure, that the death of our friend was a calamity.

Do we not however assume a knowledge of which we are not possessed when we say his death was a calamity? The world is full of the fear of death. That fear embodies an assumption that the world knows that death is undesirable.

Plutarch when he wrote to Apolonius upon the death of his son did not think so. He marshalled the philosophy of the ancients to the extent of saying that "not to be" was better than "to be."

Such philosophy has been phrased by a modern poet:

"Count o'er the joys thy days have seen
Count o'er thine hours from sorrow free
And know whatever thou hast been T'were better far thou shouldst not be."

Mayhap something akin to this philosophy is that of Nirvana whose apostle Buddha was. Cicero has told us what his idea of immortality was, "Vita enim mortuorum memoriam vivorum posita est" (For the life of the dead lies in the memory of the living).

But I am persuaded neither by Plutarch, Buddha nor Cicero.

I stand with Socrates and Jesus for the immortality of the soul. Socrates the greatest logician the world has ever produced. Jesus the greatest inspiration of mankind.

One courted death that he might shake off the trammels of the flesh and pursue his quest for truth in the company of Homer and Herodotus. The other taught the morals of a perfect life, the preparation here for a life hereafter with those we have loved and lost, and with His father our Creator.

We know the courage, the integrity, the honor with which our friend met the problems of life, and of the law and we can rejoice that he has earned the immortality of the blest.

Thus we can set it down. He is not dead. He lives.

Senator Charles W. Walton, a boyhood friend of deceased and for many years associated in the practice of law with Mr. Eckert, was the next speaker. Mr. Walton said:

It is difficult and with deep emotion that I speak in memory of our friend who has passed away, and to whose work and worth we are paying tribute today. I have known him intimately both in business and family relations since his boyhood. I have seen him grow from an energetic young student in the public schools until he reached the front rank in his profession.

We, who are members of his profession, have seen him enter into the study of law. We have seen the zeal with which he approached all problems, and we have seen the fidelity and courage with which he met every difficult issue.

He took no rest which was not enforced, and relaxation and recreation found small place in his habits of life. His duties and his sense of obligation to others were manifold, and pressed heavily upon his time.

I remember him well when he entered Judge Clearwater's office in which we were associated together for many years, and there I grew to know his sterling worth, and his high character, and many of the charming and genial qualities which endeared him to everyone with whom he came in contact.

His relationship with his clients he regarded as a sacred trust, and their welfare was ever foremost in his heart and mind. I remember well when he was elected counsel to the Board of Supervisors at the early age of 25, and the record with which he served this county is one of the brightest spots in its history. No man has ever done more for it, nor no man has given more of his time and counsel to it. I remember him in the legislative halls when he stood championing the rights of its citizens. I remember him when he was selected by a former judge of this court as a member of the executive committee of the State Bar Association of this state. I have seen him in the councils of the leading lawyers of our state, and he always commanded their respect, their friendship and their high regard. We all knew of the active part which he took in the political affairs of this county and state, and the high rank he attained in the councils of the leaders of the party to which he belonged.

He showed by both precept and by example the path to follow. He always had a genial smile and a friendly greeting which came from within. The Bar and the public would be oblivious to the merits of our institutions if they did not appreciate that here was an able and devoted public servant, who with unfinding courage and persistence pursued the pathway of his duty in his profession, and we, who were his intimate associates would be indifferent to all the influences which good men leave behind them if we did not always remember as an ideal and inspiration, the qualities of the brother who has left us. His useful life placed him in the rank of the first citizen of this county and state. His death crowns a hero whose valor, service and sacrifices for others will be gratefully remembered and reverently recounted so long as the deeds of men are told.

Handsome in physique, genial in approach, warm-hearted in action and bright in intellectual resources, he made and held hosts of friends through life.

"Illustrious for his deeds,
Beloved for his virtues."

Following Senator Walton came Surrogate George F. Kaufman, a man who had been a schoolboy friend of deceased, and who continued to the present time to be one of John W. Eckert's most loyal friends, not only professionally but personally. He said:

May it please the court:

If in what I have to say of John W. Eckert the predominant note is a personal one, it is because for many years, as every member of this Bar knows, my relations with him were extremely close and personal. For two-thirds of my life I have been privileged not merely to know John Eckert, not merely to deal with him in a business way, but to have his staunch, loyal, dependable wholehearted friendship; and in this sad hour, when the shadow of death has fallen across that friendship, it is only natural that foremost in my mind should be the thought and remembrance of John Eckert, not as a lawyer, not as a business associate, but as my friend.

More than 27 years ago, as boys, John and I entered the old Kingston Academy together. Four years later we graduated in the same class. We commenced our legal clerkships at the same time, he in Judge Clearwater's office and I in Judge Hasbrouck's. Four years later we were both admitted to the Bar and simultaneously began the long struggle to attain success in our chosen profession. From that time on our paths have been the same, although I am happy and proud to say that John Eckert long ago outdistanced me in following that path. The friendship which commenced in our boyhood days continued without the slightest rift until his death and despite all the successes which he won at this Bar, despite all the praises and honors which were showered upon him, John Eckert always remained to me just the same old plain, modest, loyal, lovable John.

There are times when words seem wholly inadequate to express sentiments that well from the heart. For me this is such an occasion. My friendship for John Eckert continued for so many years that it became an accepted and seemingly permanent part of my life and its present sudden, doleful interruption leaves me stunned and groping for words to express the sorrow and sense of enormous personal loss that I feel. I can only say from my heart that by the death of John Eckert I have lost my best friend and that I know that I shall never see his like again. I know that there are others who feel just as I do and in behalf of these old friends may I paraphrase those beautiful lines of James Whitcomb Riley:

"Ways were devious, John Eckert, that you and we have passed.
But we found you true at first and we find you true at last;
And now as we go traveling on down to the journey's end,
We want to throw wide open our souls to you, our friend.
With the strength of all our beings and heat of heart and brain
And every living drop of blood in artery and vein
We love you and respect you, and we venerate your name,
For the name of Johnny Eckert and True Friendship's just the same."

Of John W. Eckert as a lawyer I can say little that has not already been said. His manifold qualifications and extremely high capabilities in that respect have been so often and so strikingly demonstrated to the members of this Bench and Bar, in this very courtroom and in the appellate courts, that it seems almost superfluous to speak of them at all, except to draw from them precepts which every member of this Bar may well emulate.

It seems to me that Johnny Eckert possessed in abundance the attributes and qualities of not merely the successful lawyer, but of the great lawyer. He had character and moral fibre of the finest sort. He was honest. He was fair. He was loyal and dependable. He was modest. He was kind. He had courage not only to do the right, but to fight for the right. He had an innate and true sense of justice.

Such was the foundation upon which John Eckert reared the structure of his legal career. In the building of it he employed a zeal and tireless industry that could have been born only of a love of his work. No member of this Bar ever worked harder and took more pleasure in his work than did John Eckert. No man was ever more exacting and painstaking in his work than he. He seemed to take the greatest pride and satisfaction in doing his task well, whether it was great or small. Even his smaller cases were prepared with the same meticulous care that he lavished upon his most important ones. When he came into court to try a lawsuit he was fully and thoroughly prepared, whether the case was little or great. He knew his evidence. He knew his law. His plan of attack or defense was fully charted. Often he knew the other side of the case better than his adversary. He was then fully ready to bring into play those magnificent abilities which were his to demonstrate to the jury and to the court the justice of his client's cause.

I use the word "justice" in that connection deliberately in preference to "legal right". For I know that before John Eckert took a client's cause into court he convinced himself not only that it was legally right, but that it was just. He strove to avoid harsh and unjust results. I have known him repeatedly in my own court to advise compromises and settlements of litigations which his clients, by the hard and fast rules of law, might have won, because he believed that in those cases what was good law would not accomplish true justice. I have known him on a number of occasions to sacrifice his own fees in order that such a settlement might be effected. I have known him repeatedly to refuse to represent a client whom he considered to be vindictive or grasping or whose claim was harsh or bordered on dishonesty. John Eckert was not only honest with his clients, he was honest with himself.

Once convinced, however, of the justice of a client's claim he threw himself into the prosecution or defense of it with all his heart and soul. In the actual trial of a case he was extremely skillful. He was thoroughly familiar with the rules of evidence and of courtroom procedure. He framed his questions with the skill of a master. He knew when to ask questions and when not to. He knew when to object to and when not to. He knew how to bring out his evidence so that it would be most effective. He knew how to talk to a jury and drive home his points to them in their own language. But above all, he tried his cases so earnestly that it often seemed to me that jurors believed that what he claimed was right because it was so apparent that he himself believed it to be right. And if they did, they were not often wrong.

But, while John Eckert was an extremely dangerous adversary in the court-room, he was an extremely fair one. I can truthfully say that during all of the years of my acquaintance with John Eckert I never knew him inside the court room or out of it to knowingly do an unfair thing. He was fair to witnesses. He was fair to his adversary. He was fair to the Court. He tried his cases on their merits. He disdained sharp practices and appeals to prejudice. He won his cases fairly or not at all.

Some years ago I came across these lines, the authorship which I have forgotten, but which seem to me to express precisely the creed of John Eckert not only in his trial work but in his whole life:

"Lord, in the battle that goes on through life,
I ask but a field that is fair,
A chance that is equal to all in the strife,
A courage to do and to dare.
And if I should win, let me win by the code,
With my faith and my honor held high:
And if I should lose, let me stand by the road,
And cheer as the winner goes by."

The life and legal career of John W. Eckert must ever remain a tradition and an inspiration to the members of this Bar, for as time goes on and we reflect at greater length upon what he was, what he did and what he stood for the conviction must solidify itself in our minds that in him were represented and personified the loftiest and best ideals of our ancient and great profession. And so, if the Court please, I most earnestly and sincerely join in moving the resolution.

County Attorney Robert G. Groves, very close personal friend and the successor of John W. Eckert to the position of county attorney, paid a very personal tribute to deceased. He referred to Mr. Eckert in the language which the court adopted last week as a "stalwart oak" which had fallen in the prime of life. He said that a resident of the rugged Catskills, Mr. Eckert had from those mountains apparently inherited a degree of staunchness and ruggedness which had been typical of his life. He referred to Mr. Eckert's career as a lawyer, to his activities in civic matter, as a financier and as a politician.

Andrew J. Cook was the last member of the bar to pay his tribute to Mr. Eckert. Mr. Cook said he was particularly touched by the death of Mr. Eckert for it was at Mr. Cook's home that Mr. Eckert made his last public appearance. Mr. Eckert had been a guest at the Cook home the night before he took to his bed. Rather than disappoint after accepting an invitation Mr. Eckert had visited the Cook home even though he were ill. Mr. Cook said he had not known Mr. Eckert was ill that evening until late at night, so careful was Mr. Eckert to retain his suffering from others that he spent practically the entire evening with his host before he admitted his illness as "a touch of grip." This self-sacrificing nature of Mr. Eckert had been typical of his life.

Continuing Mr. Cook said he had frequently been opposed to Mr. Eckert in legal matters and in that opposition there was real opposition for Mr. Eckert was a very resourceful lawyer, able and earnest. The last case which Mr. Eckert tried in court was in opposition to Mr. Cook. He spoke of the fame of deceased and said it was not due to fate or fortune but to ability and hard work on the part of Mr. Eckert. He referred to Mr. Eckert as a leader at the Bar, a leader in civic affairs, a leader in financial circles and interested in the social activities of the entire community.

Judge Staley was last to pay his respects to Mr. Eckert. He said so much had been said of the character and ability of deceased that little remained to be said. It was difficult to realize that Mr. Eckert had passed away. In the city and about his travels in the state he had heard it frequently expressed that it was difficult to come to a realization that this stalwart man was gone.

In the practice of law Mr. Eckert was just, honest and faithful. He said no member of the Bar had borne a reputation for greater dependability than had Mr. Eckert.

By conclusion Judge Staley said he had been asked by Judge John T. Loughran to express his regrets that he was unable to attend but he was engaged in trial court in Sullivan county and had asked Judge Staley to add his tribute to a true friend.

Judge Staley directed that the resolution and remarks of counsel be spread in full upon the minutes of the court.

Number Tens

MATTIE REYNOLDS took stock of her wardrobe: a half worn-out coat, a three-year-old flimsy blue silk and two print dresses, a wool sweater and one pair of shoes without holes in the soles. Nothing to wear anywhere. Certainly nothing to wear to a wedding. And Joe had just sold the calves for a hundred dollars.

What a lot of things a hundred dollars would buy. . . . Oh, well, she knew when she married Joe Reynolds that his farm—

"But there's just one more payment after this, honey," he'd said when she mentioned a rug for the bedroom—and clothes. "Clothes? Why, girl, you always look dressed-up to me, and as for a rug—well, you just wait till the last payment is made. It'll hurt your eyes the way we'll doll up. Just one hundred more and my girl'll have a home."

And now had come that invitation to Ernest's wedding. "And I haven't a thing to wear," she told Joe, "except that flimsy old silk—and I hate it, Joe."

But Joe was immovable. The payment must be made promptly. "And as for that wedding invitation—"

He didn't finish the sentence but Mattie knew the invitation hadn't interested her husband. Well, it interested her—and they'd go. It would be the last affair of any kind they would attend together. She'd endured this old, unpaid-for farm as long as she could. One suitcase would hold every garment she possessed. Joe could have the dishes; their few pieces of furniture. She was sick of the whole mess.

But she would like to look nice at Ernest's wedding. Ernest had been fond of her in the old days.

Well, there were those two five-dollar bills hidden away in the toolhouse. Joe was saving them for seeding the small meadow. And there were four dollars and seventy cents—she'd kept careful of the count—in her dime bank, almost another five. Joe had been dear about dimes for her little bank—but too determined about business. Always business first, with Joe.

"Fifteen dollars would buy that flowered satin dress she'd seen in the window of the village store, marked down from twelve-seventy-five, and shoes. The very best shoes in the store would cost less than five dollars.

Here her glance rested upon Joe's best on the closet floor beside her own. Their bulk reminded her of something Ernest had said once, about Joe's "number tens" being in the way when her future husband had been slow to catch a figure in the square dance. She had resented the inferred comparison at the time. Ernest wore sevens.

Thoughtlessly, she picked up the big shoes beside her own small ones, idly turned them over. Why! there were holes in the soles. Joe's best. Joe would go stark naked to make those detestable payments. Well, let him.

Let's see. Where was she? Yes, her dime-bank money for shoes; the ten dollars for the satin dress.

She would walk to the village.

She paused before the mirror in the store window. The fresh air had lent additional color to her cheeks, a bluer blue to her eyes—why, three years couldn't be an eternity. She was still young, and lovely—and there was the flower-budded dress. She felt a bit of civic pride as she looked at the store things in the windows. Like a shop in the city. Men's articles on one side. Women's on the other.

With her hand on the doorlatch, she faced the men's window: Shoes. Well, what of it? Of course there would be men's shoes in the men's window. Except for one pair, all her own had holes in the soles. This stony country left its mark, and she and Joe—.

But Joe hadn't even one pair without holes in the soles. These men's shoes in the window—the price screamed at her—were exactly four-seventy. Warm, thick-soled, dressy looking.

She was suffocating . . . . too warm in the store. She would walk to the post office. Those shoes—she would look at the other window as she passed through the door.

She walked past the post office, turned and passed it again. On down to the blacksmith shop. Back again: Rosebuds. Men's shoes. Rosebuds. But she must hurry. She'd planned hot biscuits for Joe's supper. She smiled, thinking of her husband's boyish liking for hot biscuits and his pride of her skill in making them. And how proud he was of—Heavens! Why need she, at this moment, remember his pride in her economies! He must never know how she'd felt about these farm payments. It was for her he'd been so determined . . . a home for his girl . . . . comforting . . . . protecting. . . . She put her hand to her face, wet with tears.

A thousands loving little characteristics that were Joe came rushing through her mind. Good, genuine, big-footed Joe. Tears were streaming now. Thinking of Joe—and weeping. She liked men with big feet. It took a good foundation to build one. Joe was a builder. Her husband. She loved him.

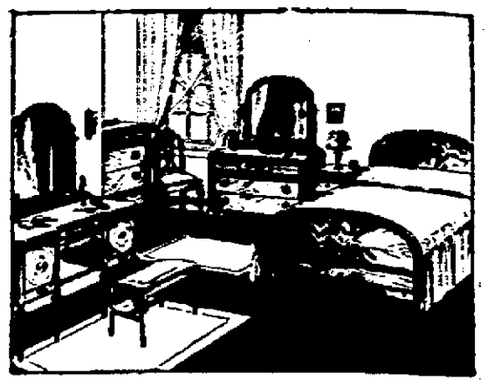

She would press the old blue silk, put fresh lace in the neck. Joe had always told her how sweet she looked in blue: blue like her eyes. But she must hurry.

Boldly, she re-entered the store—and when she left it, she carried a single package under her arm: Men's shoes. Number tens.
